Market gets a major makeover – but pot plants are returning

Work begins on refit that will see table tennis tables and public wi-fi introduced

A HUGE project working to transform Harlow Market Square is now under way and will see the introduction of table tennis tables, contemporary furniture and public wi-fi by the end of the summer.

Contractors are now on site in the move, the aim of which is to restore the market to its former glory with a mixed-use area.

Over the years, the northern part of Harlow Town Centre has struggled to maintain the footfall seen in other parts of the town centre, according to Harlow Council.

Coupled with a lack of private sector investment in commercial properties and a declining market, the council, which is leading the project, made a commitment to improve Market Square.

By introducing an array of activities, it is hoped that people and traders alike will be attracted to the area.

One day in April, there were just four stalls set up as part of Harlow Market.

Market Square was first fenced off in April ahead of the work beginning.

Recent pictures from the area show the huge red plant pots, decking features and children's playground – which were installed as part of the Harlow Renaissance project in 2011 – being removed as contractors

Councillor John Strachan

Councillor John Strachan, the newly appointed portfolio holder for regeneration, said: "The new Market Square aims to stay true to the original concept that it should be an informal, lively and varied place, and the street furniture will certainly add much-needed colour and offer an alternative experience. It is hoped that Market Square will become a place that is embraced by the Harlow community once again.

"I would like to thank Councillor Tony Durcan for his work up to this point and for setting out the vision for a revamped Market Square."

begin work on the transformation.

■ WHAT DOES THE OVERHAUL INCLUDE?

The makeover will see the square reinstate its original floor design by respected town planner Frederick Gibberd, although it will have a colourful contemporary twist.

There will also be an array of modern concrete street furniture, colourful canopies, table tennis and chess tables and public access wi-fi.

The well-known red plant pots, an important part of the Market Square landscape, will return but in a new position with suitable trees to add greenery to the area.

The aim for the new Market Square is for it to stay true to the original concept that it should be an informal, lively and varied place and one that will be embraced by the community once again.

Specialist markets and live performances could also become regular features.

The work follows consultations with residents last summer and is funded via the council's capital programme budget.

The work is due to be completed by August/September 2018.

Shock as beauty salon shuts down after nearly 30 years in Old Harlow

A BEAUTY salon in Old Harlow has unexpectedly closed after almost 30 years.

Gloria M Skincare Centre in Station Road ceased trading on Saturday, April 28, with the property since going up for leasehold.

The salon, which specialised in Dermalogica skin care, offered various treatments, including facials, shellac nails, waxing and more.

Yet a sign has since appeared on the door thanking people for their custom.

It reads: "Gloria M Skin Care – we are now closed.

"Thank you all for your custom."

A second poster on the door says that the property is currently available for leasehold.

There are also contact details for anyone wishing to view the building.

It is believed that the salon was first established in July 1990, meaning it has been in the old town for almost 30 years in the former George Hotel.

The Gloria M website is also no longer active with a message saying that the site is under construction.

Similarly, all signage at the property has been taken down.

It is not yet known why the beauticians has closed.

Dinosaur and lion among the greatest attractions of the mall

A HARLOW shopping centre received a visit from a baby dinosaur and a friendly lion this weekend in a family fun day in aid of Great Ormond Street Hospital.

Saturday's event, called One Great Day, raised £2,345.60 – all of which will be donated to the children's hospital.

Paradise Wildlife Park kicked off activities with a visit from a baby dinosaur from its newest attraction, World of Dinosaurs, which is home to 30 moving, snapping and snarling life-sized dinosaur models.

Yet the dinosaur wasn't the only wild animal to make an appearance, with children able to have a photo with the zoo's iconic lion, Safari Sam from the zoo also brought along some furry friends, including a tenrec and rabbits.

Tottenham Hotspur raffled off a pennant that had been signed by first-team players.

Guests could also enjoy a manicure courtesy of Legends, as well as face painting, craft workshops by Phoenix Resourcing and a sweet cart by Flirt PR, all for a small charitable donation.

For a small donation, people could have a go at guessing how many lollipops were in a giant jar. The winner chose to spend her £20 voucher at the Spurs Shop.

The one-day event, called One Great Day, held on Saturday, raised £2,345.60 costume characters on show from Play People to wow shoppers.

The centre's security team completed an eight-hour bike ride from 9am to 5pm on Saturday to raise money and one extra-keen team member shaved his top knot off after receiving donations.

This year has been said to be extra special because the centre worked with brands and tenants to put on extra attractions.

The Harvey Centre would like to thank all its tenants and suppliers who donated – in particular to Harlow Mobility, which made a sizeable donation.

Harvey Centre manager Bryan Young said: "Thank you to all our tenants, shoppers and staff who were so generous on Saturday – enabling us to raise a great amount of money for this hugely important hospital.

"We were able to put on a really original and memorable event that our shoppers loved – while also raising valuable funds for a vitally important hospital.

"I am very proud of what we achieved and look forward to supporting this event once again next year."

Mum vents her frustration at being forced to live in difficult conditions at hotel

The wreckage of Miss Thompson's flat after the boiler fire on April 30

'This is no way to treat a family after their home has burnt down'

By Lottie O'Neill

lottie.oneill@essexlive.news

A MUM whose flat "went up in flames" in a matter of minutes says her family has been left living in a hotel for weeks.

Joanne Thompson thinks Harlow Council isn't doing enough to rehome her and her children after they lost everything in the fire – but the council says it's "urgently seeking" accommodation for them.

The mother-of-three described the moments she ran for safety and could feel "the heat on her face" in her Harlow home.

Miss Thompson was at home with a friend when employees from a property maintenance firm were conducting work to her boiler.

She said: "Me and my friend were sitting in the flat and a big thick black smoke came through the loft hatch. There were two hissing sounds, which I realise now was a fire extinguisher.

"The loft hatch is by the front door and you could feel the heat on our faces."

Employees from HTS were servicing Miss Thompson's boiler on the day of the fire (April 30), and in the early afternoon the flames spread in the loft, causing everyone in the flats to be evacuated.

Three fire crews rushed to the scene, two from Harlow and one from Old Harlow.

They arrived shortly after 2pm, and the fire was extinguished at 2:35pm. Miss Thompson has said that crews had to return as a blanket from the loft, which was her grandfather's who has since died, was still smouldering two hours after the fire.

She said: "The workers came back from their lunch break and five minutes later the flat was on fire."

She added: "I haven't been sleeping, I have been signed off work until the end of the month until I have a home. I keep having nightmares, I keep dreaming that they're telling me to 'get out – it's on fire'. Everything you own is gone and you feel a little bit lost."

Joanne and her three young children have been staying in a hotel and have been told they could spend up to three months without a home.

She has already spent five weeks in temporary accommodation and the family have lost all of their possessions in the fire.

The mum-of-three claims that Harlow Council and HTS have acted insensitively following the incident, with one member of council staff asking her "how nice" her hotel room is only 48 hours after the event.

She added: "It is disgusting. I feel I am having to fight when they are responsible. It's not a room that has broken or needs fixing – we have lost everything. I am chasing everyone and try to keep myself together for the kids, for my kids. I am not in the wrong here."

Miss Thompson, who is 34 and has three children aged, 12, 5 and two, feels there is a lack of communication.

She says her baby has been unable to have her bottle before bed each night as the hotel won't let her have a refrigerator.

She said: "It's hard for my kids and my baby. She can't have her milk bottle at night as the hotel doesn't allow a fridge in the room. They put me in a first-floor room where the windows are secured shut – I have just been the victim of a fire."

The mum, who has lived in Harlow for years, has been bidding for properties on the council bidding scheme but claims she was told that she is "not high enough" on the list.

She said: "I should be a priority. I think it's disgusting. I shouldn't be waiting for this for 12 weeks, when having your home burnt down."

"They did it, I have lost everything, I'm thinking, 'How can you do this to me?'"

Miss Thompson has been told to bid for two-bed properties but wants a three-bedroom place for when her baby is older, as she doesn't want to move again in the near future.

She also claims that the council has changed her details to "living at the hotel", meaning she is not considered homeless or a priority on the list.

In the weeks that followed the fire that took her family home, she visited the council every day.

She explained: "The council has been so rude to me with one member of staff asking me if I could take out a personal loan whilst waiting for financial support."

"You don't go and say to someone, who has just had their home burnt down, to go and get a loan."

"It is so bad, the communication has been poor. Everything is so surreal, it's just mad."

Miss Thompson also contacted her MP Robert Halfon for help with her case.

Mr Halfon said: "Thorough investigation by Harlow Council as to what has occurred, once it has been completed if things have been found to be wrong, as the resident says, there should be compensation."

A statement from Harlow Council and HTS (Property & Environment) Limited, said: "We are sorry to Miss Thompson and her family that this accident has happened. The cause of the fire was accidental and HTS has carried out an investigation into what happened and is reviewing its procedures to ensure that something like this does not happen again."

"We both recognise that this is a difficult time for the family, and the council has provided support to the family through its tenancy support service."

"The council is urgently seeking suitable alternative accommodation for the family and has already made a suitable offer of accommodation."

"The family are instead currently staying in hotel accommodation while we wait for another council property to become available which meets their needs."

"Every effort is being made to support the family to meet both their immediate and long-term needs, which includes any insurance-related issues and welfare requirements."

"HTS and the council are currently working to retrieve and return undamaged contents from the property to enable a discussion with Miss Thompson about items which have been lost due to the fire."

Success for widow's campaign after husband, 59, died at the wheel of his lorry

Hero driver's selfless last act on M25 wins awards

By Hannah Kane

hannah.kane@essexlive.news

THE widow of a "hero" lorry driver from Harlow who pulled over on the M25 in the moments before he died at the wheel has won her campaign to have his final selfless act recognised.

On February 2 last year Jim McLeod, who was 59, was driving an 18-tonne FedEx lorry on the motorway when he began to feel unwell.

He quickly pulled over on to the hard shoulder near Heathrow Airport where he suffered a heart attack.

He died, but three hours went by before he was found.

His wife Margaret has been campaigning ever since for Jim's final decision to be recognised, and a year on he has received two commendations – one the first of its kind.

Margaret McLeod, Jim's wife, recalled: "It was a normal Thursday. He would get up every morning, give me a kiss and tell me he loved me. I always told him I loved him more.

"He had breakfast, went to Stansted Airport and loaded his lorry."

After this, Mr McLeod had driven to Heathrow and was on his way back when he had a heart attack.

But thanks to his quick thinking, he managed to save countless lives.

His wife continued: "He must have not felt well, as he pulled over to the hard shoulder, put on his hazards and what happened after I do not think I will ever know. At 4pm one of his bosses put out an alert.

"They sent someone from HR and they found him in his lorry.

"They called an ambulance and did CPR but he was confirmed dead at Slough hospital."

Mr McLeod was born in Glasgow and moved to Harlow at the age of ten.

He met his wife through his twin brother Ian, the pair married in 1976 and had lived in Harlow ever since.

With his wife, who works as a supervisor for Faber Music, the pair had two children – James, 40, and Michelle, 39, and six grandchildren.

For 20 years the family lived in Rivermill, Harlow, and had lived in Long Ley for a decade. As well as his twin brother he had another brother and two sisters.

Happy

His son James, who lives in Belfast, said: "The last action he did was to think of others. He did a good thing in the last moments of his life."

Margaret said: "All of his friends are saying he is a hero. His last act was thinking of others. An 18-tonne truck could have caused a hell of a lot of damage.

"He loved his job, he was quite happy. He never used his mobile and he was always aware of everything around him.

"He was a happy chappie, he was always winding people up and he laughed at his own jokes."

One year later, his wife has kept his memory alive in a touching way.

Margaret said: "It's been very emotional for me.

"I wanted answers, as he was left on the hard shoulder for three hours before anybody found him.

"I also wanted the companies he worked for to recognise that he was a hero for the act that he did. I didn't want any other family to go through what we went through."

With the help of the Citizens Advice Bureau, Margaret tirelessly wrote letters to Highways England and FedEx with the hope of getting her husband's heroic last actions noticed.

A few weeks went by without any word, until one day she received an amazing surprise in the post.

Highways England has offered a commendation, the first of its kind, to Mr McLeod, awarding him for his quick-thinking.

What's more, FedEx has also commended his bravery by awarding him the FedEx Humanitarian Award.

"It's been so overwhelming," said Margaret. "I'm overcome with emotion."

"I actually took the letters to the people who helped me at Citizens Advice and they were over the moon."

"That's why I wanted the letters written."

"There's also been a change, as FedEx has said all lorries must have a working phone and tracker and any FedEx driver passing another must ring and check all is ok."

Jim McLeod, a 59-year-old lorry driver, pulled over when he began to feel unwell on the M25, an action which probably saved many lives.

Pair sought by police after stabbing

TWO men are wanted by police in connection with a stabbing in Old Harlow.

Officers were called to the junction of Station Road and High Street at about 9.30pm on Friday, April 20.

The victim, a man in his 30s, was rushed to hospital after suffering a stab wound to the abdomen.

Ronnie Bromley, 24 from Harlow, and Ross Payton, 26, from Newhall, are wanted in connection with the incident.

Bromley is 5ft 9ins and has a tattoo sleeve on his right arm and Payton is 6ft and of a slim build.

A spokesman for Essex Police said: "Can you help us find Ronnie Bromley, 24, and Ross Payton, 26, in connection with a stabbing in Old Harlow?"

"We received reports that a man, aged in his 30s, was stabbed at the junction of Station Road and High Street at around 9.30pm on Friday, April 20.

Ronnie Bromley, from Harlow, and Ross Payton, from Newhall

"The victim was taken to hospital with a stab wound to the abdomen."

"Bromley, from Harlow, is 5ft 9ins and has a tattoo sleeve on his right arm and Payton, from Newhall, is 6ft and of a slim build.

"Anyone with information is asked to call Harlow CID on 101 or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111."

Public consultation over mooted town centre project attracts plenty of people

Changing surgery into flats triggers plenty of interest

CONSULTATIONS over plans to transform an existing Harlow doctors surgery into apartments will come to an end this week.

Proposals to redevelop Lister House in Staple Tye were first unveiled by Harlow Council at the start of May – although plans are yet to be officially submitted as the council is keen to hear residents' feedback.

The Perry Road development would see up to 46 apartments built as the medical centre moves to a new site on Abercrombie Way. The move is scheduled to take place in September 2018.

Affordable

At least 30 per cent of the flats are said to be affordable homes in order for the council to help provide as many affordable homes for local people on the Harlow housing needs register.

A spokesman for Harlow Council said: "All apartments will have the ability to be adapted to meet the changing needs of residents."

"The development will meet Secure By Design, and offer not only visual surveillance from the balconies but also CCTV monitoring the site and the surrounding area.

"The development has been designed to integrate with the existing shopping mews, but also have the diversity to incorporate any change long term.

"This building will hopefully be the catalyst for improvement throughout the whole of Staple Tye and the adjoining areas."

Community

A new multi-use games area is shortly due to be completed ready for community use next to the new health centre, as will be the fenced area which will have line markings for football, basketball and tennis.

And these sporting areas will be floodlit to allow sport to take place throughout the darker evenings.

Due to the high level of public interest in the project, a further drop-in consultation event took place yesterday (June 6) at the Civic Centre from 4.30pm.

And any residents can still have their say online.

So, if you want to comment, but have not done so yet, go to the online consultation form which is available until Monday (June 11).

Town politician promises to press point for more funds to boost NHS facilities

MP plans hospital debate in commons

By Piers Meyler

piers.meyler@essexlive.news

Harlow's MP is to press for funding to pay for a new hospital expected to cost around £150 million in a debate in the House of Commons.

Robert Halfon will bring a debate on June 5 to reiterate what he calls is a pressing need for a new health campus bringing together accident and emergency services, GP provision, social care, physiotherapy and a new ambulance hub.

He says the failing infrastructure means that its staff are finding it increasingly difficult to care for residents of Harlow and the surrounding area that is expected to see large increases in population over the coming years.

The announcement of the debate comes as new figures show the A&E department at Princess Alexandra Hospital in Harlow remains the worst in the country, with more than a third of patients waiting more than four hours to be treated.

Just 64.7 per cent of the 24,552 patients seen at A&E in the fourth quarter up to March 31 waited less than four hours from arrival to admission, discharge or transfer. This is nearly 30 per cent off the target of 95 per cent.

The figures published today (May 31) represent a worsening situation at the hospital's emergency department.

In December, the figure stood at 67.3 per cent waiting less than four hours.

He said: "Protecting Our NHS has been one of my priorities since becoming MP and this debate is an absolutely vital part of my campaign to ensure that healthcare in Harlow is fit for the 21st century.

"Due to changes to NHS services in neighbouring towns, and Harlow's growing population, the Princess Alexandra serves a huge number of patients.

"The failing infrastructure means that the hardworking staff are finding it increasingly difficult to care for residents of Harlow and the surrounding area.

"In our letter to the Health Secretary, I and other local MPs made clear that there continues to be a vital and pressing need for the development of a new health campus in Harlow.

Capital

"During the debate, I will raise this with health ministers and press for capital funding to make it a reality."

The trust, which is one of seven schemes requiring more than £100 million of capital, may have funding announced as soon as the autumn.

In a letter to Jeremy Hunt, Mr Halfon said that the layout of the hospital and its deteriorating infrastructure is making care problematic while recruitment and retention is difficult due to competition from Barts and UCL in London that has seen significant investment.

He added: "Finally, there is unbearable and increasing pressure on A&E services at Princess Alexandra due to recent changes to other local healthcare facilities.

"These local changes mean that

Harlow MP
Robert Halfon

the Princess Alexandra is fundamental to the health and well-being of Harlow's population and the wider area, including parts of Hertfordshire and Epping Forest. "The population of Harlow itself is growing and these additional pressures have led to occupancy levels at the hospital running higher than 96 per cent.

"The A&E department sees around 200 to 300 patients per day which is 10 per cent higher than the national average and the Care Quality Commission has confirmed the difficulty this creates for patients to be seen in a timely manner."

Emergency department improving, but still among worst for wait times

THE A&E department at Princess Alexandra Hospital in Harlow remains the worst in the country, with more than one third of patients waiting more than four hours to be treated.

Just 64.7 per cent of the 24,552 patients seen at A&E in the fourth quarter up to March 31 waited less than four hours from arrival to admission, discharge or transfer.

This is nearly 30 per cent off the target of 95 per cent.

The figures published last Thursday (May 31) represent a worsening situation at the hospital's emergency department.

In December, the figure stood at 67.3 per cent waiting less than four hours.

Princess Alexandra Hospital, Harlow

However, the trust has improved compared to the same period in 2016, when just 62.6 per cent of patients were seen in the target time.

The hospital, which was only taken out of special measures in March, was told in its CQC report that there were multiple factors affecting flow through the department, including a high rate of bed occupancy in the main hospital.

The report also revealed that it failed to meet the target of 92 per cent of patients receiving treatment within 18 weeks, or referral.

However, the target for 85 per cent of patients to start cancer treatment within 62 days was met.

The hospital also reported deficits that were almost £7 million worse than expected. It had planned to overspend by £21.5 million, but actually overspent by £28.4 million.

PAH has been contacted for comment.

More than 3,000 cars extra on the road in every rush hour, says campaign group

MORE than 3,000 cars have been added to the rush hour, say campaigners against Essex County Council's controversial nearest school free transport policy.

Essex Against School Transport Cuts (EASTC) also says the cost to taxpayers is up by more than £400 per child who qualifies for free transport.

Essex County Council announced in October 2014 that it would be cutting free school transport for children living more than three miles from their school to reduce spending.

In 2015 ECC became the first local education authority in the UK to abolish the right of children to free school transport to their catchment secondary schools where they live more than three miles away, changing this to the 'nearest' school, as well as stopping free transport for young people in further education.

Scott Wilson from EASTC said: "Our findings through a Freedom of Information request show that the impact of this policy isn't just adding extra costs for the taxpayer and parents but through finding out the dwindling numbers of children transported by bus we can show the impact on the environment too.

"This is yet further proof that not only has the cost per pupil of transporting children increased under the new policy but the impact is being felt by every resident of Essex through more pollution and congestion. We calculate that this pollution and congestion virtually invalidates the entire savings achieved by the council's Park and Ride scheme.

"Essex County Council can no longer persist with a policy which is creating an inequality in educational choice between rural and urban areas, giving thousands of parents no choice but to drive their children to school, detrimentally impacting on the health and wellbeing of all of us and we call upon Essex County Council to revise the policy urgently."

Councillor Ray Gooding, Essex County Council cabinet member for education, said: "The campaign group is being very selective in its use of figures to support a view that special deals be put in place for some areas, paid for by all other Essex taxpayers.

"It is important we provide the best possible value for money for the people of Essex, and there can be no justification for a special deal for some locations based on 'catchment areas', paid for by all other Essex taxpayers."

Rough sleeping has got worse in Harlow over the past decade

Council property plan will help the homeless find bed before cold nights

Disused properties are being suggested to help tackle town rough sleeper problem

HARLOW Council hopes to turn two disused council properties into short-term supported accommodation for the homeless in a bid to reduce the number of rough sleepers ahead of winter.

The town has seen a rise year on year in the number of people sleeping rough since 2010.

There were seven rough sleepers recorded in Harlow in 2010, however the last count in November 2017 recorded more than double that, with a total of 24.

Similarly Harlow's emergency provision was activated three times during the recent severe weather and saw up to 36 people sleeping rough supported.

Measures

At the end of May, the council submitted a proposal to the Government for £250,000 from a targeted £30million fund to be put towards measures that will help reduce rough sleeping ahead of and throughout the next winter period.

Two derelict council houses next door to one another would be refurbished and used as supported accommodation, should the proposals receive Government support.

It would not be the former Ocasio House in the town centre as this is not owned by Harlow Council.

Portfolio holder for housing, Councillor Mark Wilkinson, said: "We see rough sleeping everywhere, not just in Harlow.

"And the increase in figures locally speaks for itself.

"People want to see more done to help get rough sleepers into housing and into a more settled situation.

"Behind every rough sleeper's story there are usually many different circumstances and complex situations.

"We know that rough sleepers need more than just a place to live – that is the first solution for many – but it's the specialist support and help over the long term which is equally important.

"Sadly, some people choose to sleep rough and reject support; overcoming these barriers is all part of the project.

"Our bid includes a range of measures working with Streets2homes to provide the support to meet the different needs of different people.

"I'm hopeful that the Government will confirm its support for our proposal so that together we can do more to help those sleeping rough."

Fears raised that proposed Premier Inn next to school could pose risk to pupils

Residents object to plans for new hotel

PLANS to build a three-storey budget hotel next to a Harlow primary school were due to be decided upon this week.

The proposal was set to be discussed at a planning committee meeting last night (Wednesday).

An application submitted to Harlow Council by Whitbread PLC at the end of January proposes a 46-bedroom Premier Inn in Church Langley.

A report to the development management committee recommended that planning permission be granted subject to conditions.

However the plans, which would see a hotel open next to Church Langley Community Primary School and the Potters Arms pub, have come under fire from residents.

The application has received 288 public comments online, of which include 285 are in object and just two in support.

Residents who live close to the site all received a planning consultation letter from the council inviting them to share their views. Concerns expressed include additional traffic and the potential that opening a hotel next to a school may pose a risk to children.

Church Langley Community Primary School

Gary Brownjohn, 50, has two children who attend the primary school.

"It could be a meeting point for people who like to look at children," he explained.

"The way the plan is, it looks like the windows could face towards the side of the school."

Gary, who lives in Tickenhall Drive, also feels the traffic situation will only be made worse.

Sandra Doyle, 46, is worried about the hotel looking onto the school's front and how traffic will affect the nearby roads.

"It's just too close to the school," said Sandra, who lives in Church Langley and has one child at the school.

"It's just going to cause chaos when it's built, more traffic coming in and out and it's not part of the local community."

"Who's going to be using it? It's going to be people using the business centre - it's not for us and it's not for the local community."

Consultations have also been held with bodies including Essex County Council Highways Authority, HDC Environmental Health and Essex County Council Fire and Rescue, who either had no objections or did not wish to comment.

Essex Police raised concerns regarding the management of parking spaces within the nearby Tesco, the path leading from the car park towards the school, surveillance and boundary treatments. However after consultations with the applicant, the police say their objections have been overcome.

No evidence

The force was also asked to comment on the "unsavoury characters" who may use the site, however they confirmed there was no evidence to support this and it did not form a reason to object.

This is not the first time an application has been made by Premier Inn to build on the land, with an initial plan submitted in 2016 being withdrawn to address concerns raised.

The development if approved is estimated to take 24 weeks.

Berlin Wall fear for Harlow as roadworks threaten disruption

By Piers Meyler

piers.meyler@essexlive.news

A COUNTY council decision to close a major road through the middle of Harlow ahead of a major housing development will be similar to "creating Berlin Wall," according to the town's MP.

Robert Halfon has said the closure of London Road for two months "is a terrible decision and will cause havoc for traffic".

ECC said the closure is required for the safety of the public and workforce while new junction and traffic calming measure works are undertaken by Kaybridge Construction.

The works are taking place ahead of the start of construction on the Newhall development - for 2,700 homes.

Mr Halfon said: "The council are creating a Berlin Wall between Old Harlow and Newhall, and the rest of the town."

Closed

The road, which is around half a mile in length and runs from the London Road Roundabout to the Gilden Way Roundabout, is scheduled to be closed on July 23 for 61 days. An alternative route is available via London Road, Church Langley Way, the A414, First Avenue and vice versa.

Access for emergency service vehicles and pedestrians will be maintained at all times during the closure.

A spokesperson for Essex Highways said: "We apologise for any inconvenience the closure of London Road between the roundabout and Gilden Way might cause."

The closure, from 23 July until September will ensure safe and efficient work to be carried out to the extensive road improvements for the new junction as well as calming measures on its approach.

During the closure there will be a convenient diversion on the A414 in place of which more details can be found at www.roadworks.org.

Access at either end of the road will be facilitated for businesses. There are other roadworks, particularly involving night-only closures, in Harlow as part of a major investment in new development, road improvements and the Junction 7A scheme for the M11.

The works are taking place ahead of the start of construction on the Newhall development for 2,700 homes.

Did you know that you can get your hearing tested easily?

And it's absolutely free at Specsavers!

Our ears are amazing things - helping us to hear everything from birdsong to a glorious brass band in full swing. But hearing can often be taken for granted and many of us don't realise that over time our hearing can deteriorate, so things don't sound as sharp and clear as they used to.

Hearing loss is surprisingly common, with current estimates suggesting that it affects around 1 in 6 in the UK*. Of course, the loss usually happens quite gradually and a lot of the time you don't notice it yourself. Often it is friends or family who realise you might be having issues before you yourself become aware of it.

So what are the tell-tale signs that we should look out for? The usual ones are things like having the TV turned up so loud that others find it uncomfortable and keep asking you to turn it down, or you having to ask people to repeat themselves frequently and thinking that people are mumbling a lot, particularly in noisy pubs or restaurants.

Specsavers recommend that anyone over the age of 55 should have regular hearing checks. It is really easy and completely free from Specsavers Audiologists. You can even do it at home in the first instance using the Specsavers free hearing check app or on-line hearing test. If it turns out after your in-store hearing test that you have some hearing loss Specsavers will be able to help and advise you.

There's often a misconception around the size of hearing aids but the reality is that they come in a whole range of fitting styles that can be very small and discreet. It's incredible actually, considering the level of technology and features packed into such tiny devices. Specsavers Audiologists have all the latest hearing aids including ones that are rechargeable, made from titanium and essentially invisible to others. They can even be controlled through a smartphone.

Victim airlifted to hospital after collision involving two cars on industrial estate

Man left fighting for life following accident

By Sophie Finnegan

sophie.finnegan@essexlive.news

A MAN has been left fighting for his life after a crash in a Harlow car park.

Emergency services, including an air ambulance, were called to The Oaks Industrial Estate on Howard Way at about 10.15am on Tuesday (June 5).

Pictures from the scene showed that two cars had been involved in a collision outside Halfords.

Police set up a cordon while paramedics attended to a man believed to be in his 70s.

He was airlifted to Lister Hospital in Stevenage in a life-threatening condition, according to Essex Police.

One male witness, who wished to remain anonymous, said: "They have cordoned off the big car park."

"There was an ambulance and a couple of police cars that taped off a large area of the car park."

"I spoke to one of the officers who told me one car went up on the small verges and went into another car."

"I asked if anyone was injured and he said there was. An air ambulance landed so it seemed like someone was hurt quite badly."

Witnesses also reported seeing forensics examining a roundabout close to the scene of the crash.

No arrests have been made and police investigations are continuing.

A spokesman for Essex Police said: "We were called at around 10.15am with reports that a car had collided with another car in Howard Way. A man was taken to hospital in a life threatening condition."

"No arrests were made. Enquiries are ongoing."

A spokesman for the East of England Ambulance service said: "We were called at 10.15am to reports of road traffic incident on the Oaks Retail Park in Harlow.

"We sent an ambulance, a rapid response vehicle and the Magpas Air Ambulance to the scene."

"They treated a man, believed to be in his 70s, at the scene and transferred him by helicopter to the Lister Hospital for further care."

Support for those with dementia

IT IS estimated that 225,000 people will develop dementia this year alone.

That's one person every three minutes. We'd like to take a moment to tell you about the ways that we provide support to people living with dementia and their loved ones across the UK.

We understand that being diagnosed with a life-changing condition like dementia is often incredibly overwhelming and can leave couples and families feeling unsure of where to turn when they are in need of support. That's why, we'd like to reassure you that you need not face things alone, we are here to help.

We are also proud to be the UK's leading experts in providing holidays for people with Alzheimer's and dementia through our specially tailored breaks.

We appreciate that a change in routine and scenery can feel especially daunting for someone living with dementia. That's why we've taken a great deal of care and consideration to ensure that every aspect of our Alzheimer's holidays are designed with our guests in mind, enabling carers and their loved ones to spend quality time together once more, and to have the chance of a proper break.

For more information about Revitalise, our specialist Alzheimer's holidays, or to request a brochure please visit: www.revitalise.org.uk, or call us on: 0303 303 0145.

Sheds are community workshop spaces where people come together to take part in practical skills and activities. They are designed and run by their members and provide opportunities for people to share tools, resources and skills in order to create, learn and develop social networks.

Royal Voluntary Service, with funding from the Asda Foundation, run the Sheds Grant Fund to provide small scale funding to sheds who are looking for help with either set up or next stage development costs.

£63,617 of funds has been awarded to 77 sheds across the UK in the last two years to kick start or grow their ambitions.

Grants of between £250 and £1,000 are available from the Sheds Grant Fund. All applications need to come from constituted, volunteer-led community groups and must be submitted by the deadline of Sunday, June 24 to be considered. Successful applicants will be contacted w/c July 23.

NEIGHBOURHOOD NEWS

Inspector, Harlow Community Policing Team

AS a result of information from members of the public we have been able to identify some of the youths riding off road bikes causing a nuisance to residents.

Four warning notices have been issued and two motorbikes have been seized.

I am aware that there are still issues with off-road bikes and we will continue to take action to deter this anti-social behaviour over the summer months.

I understand that there have been problems getting through to Essex Police on the 101 telephone number, an issue that is being addressed but I would urge you to continue to report nuisance motorbikes either on phone or via email.

Antisocial behaviour continues to be a problem in the area of Adams House and Terminus Street.

Having spoken with local business owners and residents, I understand the level of concern and distress that this is causing at the moment.

We have started to increase police patrols in the area, both uniformed and plain clothes, with a view to dealing with this issue.

In the past week arrests have been made for possession of controlled drugs with intent to supply and breach of a court order.

As a result of complaints we supported Trading Standards with the execution of three warrants at shops in the town centre where illegal cigarettes were seized from two of them.

The Community Policing team also executed a drugs warrants at an address in Churchfields Harlow in May where in excess of 100 mature cannabis plants were found and seized.

The occupant was arrested and remanded in custody and the plants destroyed, again another issue that affects the quality of life for local residents and puts people at risk due to the dangerous use of electrics.

Although the number of burglaries remain low in Harlow with the warm weather continuing and summer fast approaching, it's worth a reminder to keep your home safe and secure.

Do not leave windows open even if you're only going out for a short period of time, remember to double lock front doors especially the UPVC type as this has been a method for gaining entry to properties in recent burglaries.

The latest 'coffee with cops' was due to be held today (Thursday, June 7) from noon to 1pm in McDonald's at Staple Tye – an opportunity to discuss issues with officers from the Community Policing Team.

Please also look out for regular updates on both the Harlow Police Twitter and Facebook sites.

Non-emergency telephone contact 101; email – HarlowCPT@essex.pnn.police.uk, Facebook and Twitter.

TALKING POINT

The £50m question - is it fair to splash out?

THE BIG QUESTION:

£50 million is said to be given to grammar schools to create new places, is this fair considering the funding crisis for state schools?

GREEN PARTY

Reza Hossain

THE largest determining factor for educational attainment is for children to be brought up from a young age with books and reading and conversation.

This is currently done better by the middle classes. The large difference between middle class children and poorer children is already obvious to see at school by age four to five years.

And by the time children have reached 10 years old, there are massive differences in ability between children from middle class, and poorer children. These differences usually remain there for life.

Part of the reason the Finnish system at the moment is better than ours because the focus on helping mothers and children in difficult communities at a really young age to help them.

Finland's education system is a comprehensive system – and always ranks very highly internationally.

In Finland, children are treated as individuals. If one method fails, teachers consult with colleagues to try something else.

There are very few tests and there are no rankings.

There is a massive funding crisis in education – £2.8

billion has been cut from the school's budget since 2015.

And many schools are facing real term budget cuts per pupil.

Primary schools will lose £52,000 on average, and secondary schools are losing £178,000 on average.

Many head teachers and governors facing the unfortunate task of deciding whether to cut subjects from the curriculum or whether to increase class size or to cut staff.

We should not be allocating an extra £50 million to create additional grammar schools in the present context that we have.

But we should be funding all schools properly.

We also should be putting significantly extra funding into early years intervention – and for trialling the Finnish education system in the UK.

UKIP

Jesse Pryke

YES, of course it is. There is a funding crisis throughout the whole of the public sector.

Look at potholes in the road. The place is crumbling around us.

But that is no reason not to spend money on targeted areas.

Grammar schools enable bright children from poor backgrounds to get a decent start in life.

It's all very well for Labour MPs who got a leg up by attending grammar school now trying to kick away the ladder for those who might follow.

Even in the Soviet Union, that great paradise of Marxist-Socialist ideology, if they discovered a child with ability the state would whip them off to an elite academy, using the natural material it had been given.

No middle-class angst about equality or "elitism".

On the subject of elitism, don't we want "elite" scientists and engineers?

If I'm in a plane I'd rather it was being flown by an elite pilot rather than someone who just scraped through with a D minus and muddles his port with his starboard.

The Grammar School Heads Association is committing the sector to widening access and working with other local schools to raise standards for all children.

Jim Skinner, chief executive of the Grammar School Heads' Association, said: "We are very pleased that, like other good and outstanding schools, selective schools now have access to a fund to allow them to expand their premises."

"This is particularly important at a time when there are increasing numbers of pupils reaching secondary age and such high demand from parents for selective school places."

But the Government would do well to remember the impact school funding had on the voting intentions of the public during the last general election.

LABOUR

Chris Vince

AS a teacher in a state school I can give an overwhelming answer of NO to this question.

The Government's proposed cash injection to grammar schools is frankly scandalous and a kick in the teeth to state schools who have seen their per pupil funding cut in real terms since the coalition came to power.

Rest assured, this decision is entirely ideological on the part of the Tory administration.

The Tories will tell you this funding is to go towards supporting Pupil Premium students in grammar schools.

However, the majority of PPI students (and by the way the PPI status as I have always said isn't very accurate in the first place) go to state schools where funds have been cut.

In reality this fund will go towards expanding grammar schools.

It is nothing less than a covert way of getting around the ban on more grammar schools.

At a time of public spending restrictions in education this is a waste of money.

This £50 million should be going towards improving all schools so that every child has the best possible education.

While it may benefit a small minority it won't close the gap between the rich and the poor and if anything it will increase it.

Pupils have transition to secondary school eased with a week-long visit

YEAR 5 pupils from Potter Street Academy and Purford Green Primary experienced life at secondary school when they spent a week at partner school Passmores Academy recently.

A range of interesting activities and lessons were organised which kept the pupils on their toes and introduced them to new concepts and ideas.

Experiences included testing acid and alkaline substances in science, and writing and performing their own poetry in English. There was an unexpected twist on maths when pupils eagerly spent a morning creating maze puzzles and tessellations in a 'maths meets art' workshop.

As well as classroom-based learning, the pupils also took part in a careers event organised in conjunction with Harlow College. The youngsters had the chance to experience seven different careers which ranged from building and thatching a roof, to hairdressing.

Passmores careers coordinator, Tammy Bassett, said: "This was a really successful event with all pupils fully engaged in the activities. The children tried everything out, and even if it wasn't their usual preference, they all got involved."

Head of Purford Green Primary and Potter Street Academy, Emma Bloomfield, added: "Transition to secondary school can be a stressful time for any child so to have the opportunity to spend a week experiencing day-to-day life at Passmores really supports our children. By the time Purford Green and Potter Street pupils transfer schools at the end of Year 6, Passmores is like a second home to them and the move becomes seamless."

"We are always looking for different ways to enhance learning opportunities, and the activities organised by Passmores and Harlow College allow our children to apply their learning in different situations and takes learning outside of the four walls of their classroom."

Role model Tegan to receive a Diana volunteers' award

ST Mark's Year 11 pupil, Tegan Lintonbon-Baker, has received a Diana Award for volunteers. The Diana Awards were established in 1999 by the government, which wanted to continue Princess Diana's legacy through a formal way of recognising young people who go above and beyond the expected in their local communities.

Tegan has volunteered for five years with school netball teams and a local netball club, coaching young players. She attends training sessions and matches for both her school teams and her local club, working on training drills, improving technique and monitoring play in matches to identify areas for further development. Already, in this academic year alone, she has volunteered 150 hours.

Tegan's positive impact on a large number of girls has helped raise self-confidence and self-esteem in young players, as their skills improve and they achieve success. Teachers and pupils refer to Tegan as a positive role model. Younger pupils recognise her commitment and selflessness for their benefit, and the success she has achieved as a player has inspired them and they look up to her.

Tegan will attend a ceremony in London in July, where she will receive her award. She is also invited to visit Althorp House in Norfolk during the summer – the ancestral home of Princess Diana.

On hearing of the honour, Tegan said: "I was surprised to be nominated as I was just enjoying my volunteer work and not expecting any awards. I am delighted to receive the award and grateful to everyone at St Mark's who contributed to my nomination."

Heyday of the town's Birdcage night spot

THE most popular place of entertainment in Harlow back in 1967 was the Birdcage.

It opened on Saturday, October 7, 1967, preceded by a private event the previous night featuring the King Brothers and the Birdcage Showband.

The Birdcage was located in the market square of Harlow town centre, also known as The High.

Many residents of Harlow gathered to celebrate the opening of the new nightspot. It was described as a "beautifully designed lavishly equipped" venue which brought a new sensation of all-round entertainment to the new town.

Events included everything from wrestling to jazz nights. Every lunchtime from Monday to Friday there was a disco session where people had the opportunity to dance whilst eating light snacks and drinking coffee and soft drinks, as reported in the Harlow Citizen.

The Birdcage was also expected to "bring a big beat to the heart of Harlow."

The Birdcage was popular among the youth of Harlow, due to its modernisation from Stone Cross Hall.

As well as The Birdcage, new forms of entertainment arose in Harlow's streets, such as a dance hall, a cinema, and the Playhouse.

Although The Birdcage was a popular destination for many party-goers, its owners experienced financial losses after only six-weeks in Harlow.

The Urban District Council soon made the first cutback in the club's entertainment programme. Wrestling was tried twice but a smaller attendance at the second session than at the first was not what was intended.

The average weekly loss at the Birdcage six weeks from opening was around £340 in 1967, equivalent in today's values to about £5,804.

The Harlow Citizen reported in December of that year that the cost of running the hall was about £345 a week. The council never did expect the Birdcage to be a profitable organisation, but hadn't foreseen it running at a loss.

Many residents of Harlow prominently remember there being birds in cages outside the nightspot.

However there are no known photographs to back this up. There are no clear photographs known of the exterior or the internal decoration of the building, just many photos of people dancing whilst at the venue.

This may be because of the mixed opinions of the users.

"The birdcage is OK – it will do," said one hard-to-please teenager.

In today's society people have much more option regarding entertainment. There are many more alternative options; for example coffee shops in which people gather to socialise. Nonetheless the Birdcage's objective to create a social atmosphere for the young and old still lives on within cinemas, restaurants and nightclubs in the town. In Harlow today, a place like the Birdcage would be useful as it would be a place for young people to go and socialise with their friends and family without getting into trouble.

YOUR CHARITY NEWS

Fundraiser aims to conquer fear of heights with skydive

THE Head of Community Engagement for Public Health England's Science Hub Programme, Michael Beard, is set to skydive for local charity St Clare Hospice on Saturday June 9.

Michael will jump from a plane at 13,000ft, reaching speeds of up to 120mph on his descent back to the ground. Aiming to raise £1,000 for the West Essex and East Herts hospice charity, Michael's fundraising efforts could pay for over 50 one-hour counselling sessions for patients and families facing one of life's most difficult journeys.

Commenting on why he chose to take on this challenge for St Clare Hospice, Michael commented: "Believe it or not I am afraid of heights, so it would take a really good cause to make me jump from a plane. During my engagements around Harlow, I had the opportunity to tour St Clare Hospice. When I saw first-hand the work that they do, and heard about their urgent need for revenue, I didn't have a choice. I will have to forget my fears for a few minutes and hopefully raise a lot of money for a really incredible cause. PHE has always said it wants to be a big part of the Harlow community, so how could I say no?"

Michael added: "Last year, the hospice helped more than 1,800 people and their families – which is a 20 per cent increase from five years ago. The annual cost of providing specialist care services at St Clare is £4.2million, and they have to raise 54 per cent of this themselves. Need I say more? I am raising money for St Clare, an asset to the local community, to help them continue their remarkable work."

Michael's skydive challenge will fall ahead of Public Health England's move to Harlow.

The first staff are expected to move in at the end of 2021 with the final moves in 2024.

Up to 2,750 staff could be based at the site (GSK's previous Harlow headquarters).

Public Health England's relocation was based on a decision to move to the middle of the London-Stansted-Cambridge Life Sciences Corridor, which is also near to the Harlow Enterprise Zone.

Corporate Partnerships Manager at St Clare Hospice, Amy Jacobs, said: "We are thrilled to receive the support of Michael, and Public Health England, ahead of their exciting move

Michael Beard will take on a skydive challenge for St Clare Hospice to Harlow. Taking on a challenge like this, for your local hospice, really is the perfect embodiment of community spirit and going the extra mile to make a difference. A huge thanks to Michael from all of us here at St Clare."

If you would like to sponsor Michael during his skydive challenge and make

Hospice celebrates its dedicated volunteers

EVERY year from Friday June 1 until Thursday June 7, organisations, charities and communities across the UK take part in the celebration of volunteers who offer their time and skills to make a difference.

Volunteers' Week provides an opportunity to recognise and respect their invaluable efforts.

Hastingwood-based charity, St Clare Hospice, is celebrating the more than 500 volunteers who are essential in helping the organisation to maintain its standard of care and diverse range of services.

The West Essex and East Herts charity will host a number of celebrations within its different departments in honour of their volunteers during the week.

Aged from 14 to 92 years, the volunteers provide a huge variety of support across all St Clare services. Voluntary roles range from helping out in the hospice's eight charity shops, to helping on their Inpatient Unit, providing bereavement support or companionship to people in their homes; alongside other crucial roles such as, photography, gardening, fundraising, helping at events – or being a trustee.

To mark the week, St Clare will also premiere a celebratory film on Friday July 1, featuring volunteers from around the hospice, on the St Clare Hospice Facebook page at:

www.facebook.com/stclarehospice

Rob Wallace, St Clare's Voluntary Services Manager, said: "Our 500 volunteers here at St Clare lend a hand to our hospice day in and day out, literally enabling us to deliver care and support that changes lives within our local community. We humbly appreciate their unconditional generosity all year around, but it is during Volunteers' Week that we are reminded of just how essential they are within the organisation, giving their time and skills to make a difference."

Rob continued: "Over the course of a year, the support we receive from volunteers amounts to 100,000 hours in donated time – and we are continuously recruiting new people who want to help our hospice.

"It is with their dedication to St Clare, and helping people in the local community, that we are able to keep developing our services, continuing to improve our care. Volunteers' Week gives us all a chance to say a huge 'thank you' to them, celebrating their hard work and all they do."

For more information about how you can volunteer with St Clare Hospice, visit their website at www.stclarehospice.org.uk/ volunteer or contact their Voluntary Services Manager, Rob Wallace on rob.wallace@stclarehospice.org.uk or call 01279 773722.

Council's call for funding to help rough sleepers back into housing

HARLOW Council has submitted a proposal to the Government to help get people sleeping rough in the town into housing.

The council has asked for £250,000 from a targeted £30m fund which aims to reduce the number of people sleeping rough before and throughout the next winter period. Council officers have been working closely with the Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government on the co-production of a proposal.

There were 24 rough sleepers in Harlow when the last estimated rough sleeper count took place in November 2017. This figure had continued to increase every year since 2010 when there were seven rough sleepers in the town.

This year during the severe weather Harlow's emergency provision was activated three times and supported up to 36 people sleeping rough.

If successful, the money will be used on a range of measures, including:

- Employing a full-time co-ordinator to oversee services and support for rough sleepers.

- Funding two extra outreach/tenancy support workers to work for Streets2Homes.

- Providing support to help get people off the street and into settled accommodation suited to their needs.

- Extending severe weather provision across the winter period (November to February) so a range of different accommodation can be provided to suit individual circumstances.

- Turning a disused council property into short-term supported accommodation where up to six rough sleepers can stay and receive targeted support from Streets2Homes.

Councillor Mark Wilkinson, portfolio holder for housing, said: "We see rough sleeping everywhere, not just in Harlow, and the increase in figures locally speaks for itself. People want to see more done to help get rough sleepers into housing and into a more settled situation.

"Behind every rough sleeper's story there are usually many different circumstances and complex situations.

"We know that rough sleepers need more than just a place to live – that is the first solution for many – but it's the specialist support and help over the long term which is equally important.

"Sadly, some people choose to sleep rough and reject support; overcoming these barriers is all part of the project.

"Our bid includes a range of measures working with Streets2Homes to provide the support to meet the different needs of different people.

I'm hopeful that the Government will confirm its support for our proposal so that together we can do more to help those sleeping rough."

Free bereavement counselling on offer

FEELINGS of grief can take many forms, including sadness, anger, relief, depression and many others, everyone experiences grief in different ways. Sometimes people need a little extra help to cope through this difficult time.

Daniel Robinson and Sons, local independent family funeral directors, are proud to say that they can now offer the families that use their services bereavement counselling, free of charge.

They have teamed up with SAIF, the Society of Allied and Independent Funeral Directors, who have introduced a new service entitled SAIFCare.

By investing in this new service, Daniel Robinson and Sons' clients may now access up to six face-to-face, fully funded, bereavement counselling appointments with skilled and qualified counsellors.

There is also the option of remote counselling by telephone or through Facetime. The sessions are aimed at helping people to understand their experiences of grief, develop self-care and coping strategies and to deal with the challenges they may be facing.

Gary Neill, managing director, said: "We are always looking to enhance the services that we offer to families. We try to make the time of bereavement as comfortable as possible. We know just how vital a service this will be for many people and we are delighted that we can now offer free bereavement counselling for our clients."

Harlow Council ceremonial chain of office handed to councillor for the second time

COUNCILLOR Maggie Hulcoop has been elected the new Chair of Harlow Council with Councillor Clive Souter elected Vice-Chair of Harlow Council for 2018/19.

Councillor Hulcoop takes over the ceremonial role from Cllr Sue Livings.

Maggie's chosen charities for 2018/19 will be the homeless charity Streets2Homes and the Dolphin children's ward at Princess Alexandra Hospital. This is Maggie's second time as Chair of the Council after previously holding the role in 2012-13.

Councillor Hulcoop is councillor for the Harlow Common ward and Councillor Souter serves the Sumners and Kingsmoor ward. Both were elected to their roles at the annual council meeting held on May 24.

During her year in office the outgoing Chair of the Council, Cllr Sue Livings, raised £3,025 each for her two chosen charities – St Clare Hospice and Action for Family Carers. Before handing over the chain of office

Councillor Hulcoop, Councillor Livings said that it had been an honour and privilege to serve as Chair of the Council and that she was overwhelmed that she had raised more for her charities than the target she had set of £5,000. Personal highlights from Sue's year included the Harlow Carnival held in July and a sculpture tour she held for visitors to the town.

On taking up the role Councillor Hulcoop said: "I don't have to tell you what a great honour and privilege it is to be back in the role of serving this town and its residents, spreading the word about what a tremendous town and people we have here in Harlow."

Civic Awards presented to Harlow's magnificent seven community heroes

AWARDS have been handed out to seven local people who have made an outstanding personal commitment and contribution to the Harlow community.

The Harlow Civic Awards are handed out every year by the Chair of Harlow Council at the council's annual meeting which is held at the end of May in the Civic Centre.

The Chair of Harlow Council for 2017-18, Councillor Sue Livings, presented awards to the following:

■ FRANCES AND STEVE DONOVAN - Nominated by Councillor Tony Durcan for their contribution as volunteers to the Bat Sanctuary at Parndon Wood. At least once a week Frances and Steve volunteer at the reserve to check on the bats who are in the protected enclosure at Parndon Wood contribution to local theatre group Razed Roof and the local community. Annette is also a local activist for the Morley Grove residents' association. The theatre company links with local schools and integrates music and acting with special needs adults from the local community.

■ ZULQAR CHEEMA - Nominated by Councillor John Strachan for his outstanding contribution to his local community over the past 20 years or so and the work he does as part of Berecroft Residents' Association. The residents' association was presented with a Queen's Award for Voluntary Service in 2016. This would not have been possible without all the work Zulqar has put in over the years.

■ WILLIAM TENNISON - Nominated by Councillor Ian Beckett for championing mental health in the town. William has demonstrated not only the desire, but the commitment and ability to inspire other young people to speak up about health challenges and to seek help and support that they need from a variety of sources.

■ MICK ELLIS - Nominated by Edna Stevens for his many years of work as head coach of Harlow Judo Club. After many years of trying to secure a dojo, the club secured a tenancy at Fold Croft. This has enabled the club to grow and Mick was recently key to the club securing and delivering a £150,000 refurbishment of the facility.

■ RHONDA MURTHAR - Nominated by Councillor Russell Perrin for her 27 years of loyal and dedicated public service as head teacher of Stewards Academy. When Rhonda became head teacher of Stewards, she was one of the youngest head teachers in Essex and went on to become one of the longest serving. She has been and continues to be an inspirational role model for thousands of children across Essex.

DVD AND STREAMING

Richard Jenkins and Sally Hawkins in The Shape Of Water Photo: 20th Century Fox/Kerry Hayes

THE SHAPE OF WATER (15)

Available from June 11 on streaming and download services, and from June 25 on DVD and Blu-ray

Elisa (Sally Hawkins) works as a cleaner alongside sharp-tongued pal Zelda (Octavia Spencer) at Occam Aerospace Research Centre, a top-secret US government site where scientist Robert Hoffstetler (Michael Stuhlbarg) conducts experiments to propel America ahead of the Soviet Union in the space race.

Colonel Richard Strickland (Michael Shannon) shepherds a large metal container into one of the laboratories. Inside is a beguiling aquatic creature (Doug Jones).

Elisa becomes emotionally attached to the otherworldly arrival, using sign language and music as a crude yet effective form of communication. They eventually fall in love and the mute cleaner hatches a hare-brained plan to liberate her web-footed paramour, abetted by Zelda and her scaredy-cat neighbour Giles (Richard Jenkins).

Set in 1962 Baltimore, The Shape Of Water is a swoon-inducing reimagining of the Beauty And The Beast fairy tale between a "princess without a voice" and a carnivorous merman.

Mexican filmmaker Guillermo del Toro recaptures the visual splendour and simmering menace of Pan's Labyrinth with this gorgeous, erotically-charged love story, which empowers its richly drawn female characters to drive forward a tightly wound narrative and defeat prejudice in its myriad ugly forms.

BLACK PANTHER (12)

Available from June 11 on streaming and download services, and on DVD and Blu-ray Prince T'Challa (Chadwick Boseman) returns to grief-stricken Wakanda – a pacifist, technologically advanced society "hidden in plain view" – following the murder of his father, King T'Chaka (John Kani), in a terrorist bombing.

Four of the African nation's five clans, including the border tribe led by T'Challa's best friend W'Kabi (Daniel Kaluuya), support his ascension but the Jabari mountain people commanded by M'Baku (Winston Duke) loudly voice their opposition.

Fragile allegiances fracture and CIA-trained operative Erik "Killmonger" Stevens (Michael B Jordan) chooses this moment to stage a bloody coup.

Flanked by formidable bodyguard Okoye (Danai Gurira), T'Challa rouses his supporters including his mother Ramonda (Angela Bassett), spunky teenage sister Shuri (Letitia Wright) and old flame Nakia (Lupita Nyong'o).

Black Panther repeatedly flexes impressive technical muscles as it expands the lucrative Marvel Comics universe with aplomb.

Pulse-quickenng skirmishes above and below Wakandan ground are choreographed at a furious pace, and a car chase through the night-time streets of Busan in South Korea employs slow motion acrobatics to dizzying effect.

TROUBLED GENIUS

MCQUEEN (15) ★★★★★

Born and raised in the London borough of Stratford, Lee Alexander McQueen was a tortured genius of working class origins, who challenged the fashion establishment with his catwalk shows influenced by death, depravity and violence.

He was a defiantly original yet heart-breakingly fragile voice in a rarefied world that didn't always understand or appreciate his bold ambitions.

The press labelled him a misogynist for his 1995 Highland Rape collection, which draped torn Scottish tartans over bruised models, who staggered down the runway as if they had just been physically assaulted backstage.

STUNNED

For his spring 2001 show entitled Voss, he created a giant mirrored cube lit from within, allowing a stunned audience to view models staggering around the enclosed space in the guise of asylum patients.

The performance culminated in a shocking recreation of Joel Peter Witkin's grotesque 1983 photographic tableau Sanitarium, comprising a voluptuous woman breathing through a mask.

"Fat birds and moths – isn't that fashion's worst nightmare?" gleefully snorts fetish writer Michelle Olley, who recreated the pose in McQueen's show, during one fascinating segment of Ian Bonhote and Peter Ettedgui's lavishly designed documentary.

McQueen charts the rise of the openly gay trailblazer from his awkward teenage years, through an enduring friendship with mentor Isabella Blow (she persuaded him to trade under his middle name) and a controversial appointment as lead designer of Parisian fashion house Givenchy.

"When Lee was 17, he said, 'I'll make you a couple of skirts', fondly recalls his sister Janet. "I've got to say, they fitted like a glove!"

Archive footage and recollections from mentors – McQueen listened obsessively to Sinead O'Connor confides Red Or Dead's John McKitterick – are intermingled with the designer's personal testimony about his craft and a penchant for shocking his audience.

Key collections and catwalk shows are meticulously dissected including the 1999 ready-to-wear collection which culminated in model Shalom Harlow posing on a revolving wooden platform as two robot arms sprayed her strapless white dress with streaks of yellow, green and black paint.

"You don't move forward if you play safe," McQueen professes.

His drug-fuelled battles with personal demons are illustrated in tearful confessions from close collaborators although there is a curious absence on-screen of ex-husband George Forsyth.

A lush orchestral score composed by Michael Nyman, who provided the soundtrack to some of McQueen's shows, elegantly plucks heartstrings as the film glides towards its tragic conclusion and his 2010 suicide before his mother Joyce's funeral.

"If I've had a bad day, I've only got myself to talk to," laments the designer.

Bonhote and Ettedgui's artfully staged biography is a beautifully tailored tribute to a man who irrevocably changed the trajectory of British fashion.

"If you want to know me, just look at my work," says McQueen late in the film.

His documentary respectfully and reverentially honours his wish.

McQueen is on limited release from Friday, June 8.

Dinosaurs return with extinction threat

JURASSIC WORLD: FALLEN KINGDOM (12A)

RELEASED in 2015, Jurassic World – the fourth instalment of the blockbuster franchise – became the second highest grossing film that particular year behind Star Wars Episode VII: The Force Awakens.

A splashy sequel subtitled Fallen Kingdom beckons with Spanish filmmaker J A Bayona in the director's chair and high expectations that dinosaurs will rule the box office again this summer.

It has been three years since the Jurassic World theme park on Isla Nublar welcomed its last guests.

Genetically engineered beasts roam freely, contained on their island sanctuary off the Pacific coast of Central America.

Scientists discover that a volcanic eruption is imminent, which will render the dinosaurs extinct. Again.

Former park manager Claire Dearing (Bryce Dallas Howard) and her gung-ho boyfriend Owen Grady (Chris Pratt) agree to return to the fallen paradise to oversee a rescue mission that will transplant the remaining wildlife to a new facility on the American mainland.

Benjamin Lockwood (James Cromwell), a former business associate of Jurassic Park's founder John Hammond, provides the financial muscle to complete the evacuation before the volcano explodes.

However, external forces are working against Claire and Owen, and a flesh-hungry dinosaur hybrid escapes its enclosure with terrifying repercussions for the nearby population.

FILM INTERVIEW

Chris Pratt and Bryce Dallas Howard are back together in the Jurassic World sequel but, as they tell Laura Harding, they can't get their kids to care

Chris Pratt is kind of a big deal in Hollywood these days. With his Parks And Recreation days far behind him, he's now a major box office draw in Guardians Of The Galaxy, The Lego Movie and Jurassic World.

But the one person who still isn't impressed by all this is his five-year-old son Jack, who he shares with ex-wife Anna Faris.

"It's been really important to both me and Jack's mum to instil this idea that we're just actors," he says.

"It's not that big of a deal, but then he really adopted it and I was like urrrgh."

He moans loudly.

"I'm like, 'Kid, listen. It's not really a big deal, it's just what we do' but then I'll say, 'Hey, did you see me outrun that dinosaur?' and he replies, 'dad you're just an actor, it's not that big of a deal'."

"He adopted it too well. He doesn't know about fake humility."

Bryce Dallas Howard, his co-star in both Jurassic World and its upcoming sequel Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom, is sitting next to him in a London hotel room and bursts out laughing.

IMPRESS

As a mother of two, she knows this feeling all too well.

"It's hard to impress your own children, it really is," she says with a chuckle.

To add insult to injury, Jack is now more impressed by the people who play his dad's character, raptor trainer Owen Grady, at the Universal Studios theme park.

"He went and saw the Jurassic World ride and there is a guy who's dressed up as my character and he'd keep these fake dinosaurs and raptors at bay."

"Then Jack came home and goes, 'dad, today I went to Universal. Guess what I saw? The real Owen!' I was like, 'What?!'"

Pratt looks indignant: "Our kids don't seem to give a s."

Howard, who is mother to 11-year-old son Theodore and six-year-old daughter Beatrice, is actually faring slightly better.

"My son is in fifth grade now and so there's a lot of play dates and there's a bunch of boys over at my house every single weekend."

DINO TROUBLE

"There are a few mornings where I've woken up to the sound of Jurassic World playing on the TV."

"They've snuck in and it's 5am and they're all watching Jurassic World and that is the coolest for me."

Their shared experience as parents is part of the reason Pratt and Howard have such an easy banter and an apparently close relationship.

They giggle together frequently and make jokes at each other's expense.

It must have made working together again on the new dinosaur-fest – which follows the events of 2015's box office smash and sees Owen and Howard's Claire Dearing return to Isla Nublar to rescue the dinosaurs there before a huge volcano erupts and kills them all – a whole lot easier.

"Right away, we fell into a very natural dynamic and partnership," Pratt says.

"It was really nice to have that going into this film. We definitely leaned on each other a lot and I think that the dynamic between Owen and Claire is really strong."

"I think our friendships just deepened, we have kids the same age."

"You don't always get to work with people you really like and so this is a really nice experience."

It also helped plot-wise too. The new instalment, which also stars James Cromwell, Toby Jones and Rafe Spall, sees Jeff Goldblum return to the Jurassic Park franchise, and ties directly back to the original 1993 film.

"We're building on a foundation that was established in the previous Jurassic World," Howard nods.

"And Jurassic World similarly was also a sequel, so we're also building on Jurassic Park."

"But the fact now that we've had one movie already means I was less afraid of being fired and we get to have a bit more fun."

Pratt agrees: "You know the characters, you know where you've been, you have a little security that they can't fire you, but it also comes with a whole new set of challenges in terms of how to take the story and make it global."

"How to go beyond the island, how to expand the story so it can truly become Jurassic World – so we traded the first challenges for a set of new challenges."

I assume they are kidding about their fears of being fired, but apparently not.

"I totally did," Pratt insists.

"It's not at the forefront of my mind," Howard adds. "But I always clock when I'm past the halfway mark of shooting because I think, 'It would be really expensive to fire me now'."

"And you can tell!" Pratt laughs. "She becomes a nightmare. Guess who's three hours late today?"

For the second film, the actress was more concerned about her feet than about getting fired.

If that sounds odd, then you might have missed the controversy that surrounded her character's footwear in Jurassic World, when fans of the film took issue with the fact she was running from dinosaurs in a pair of high heels.

The sequel offers a cheeky nod to the furore, and the first shot of Howard is of her feet.

"I had a specific conversation that was, 'don't put me in sneakers in the first scene, put me in heels please'."

"She's going to be prepared coming to the island this time."

"Last time she didn't say, 'OK, I'm gonna be on the island, I'm going to be running, so stilettos, that's what this calls for'."

"This time, she was definitely prepared, going to the island in boots."

"But when we were shooting some of the earlier scenes, it was really important to me that Claire wears heels because Claire can handle a pair of heels, she's comfortable."

FOOD & DRINK

INGREDIENTS:

(Serves 8)

4 garlic bulbs, 2.5kg boned and rolled pork shoulder, zest of 1 lemon, olive oil, for drizzling, sea salt and freshly ground black pepper. For the fennel slaw: 8 fennel bulbs, juice of 4 lemons, 300ml olive oil, 2tsp caster sugar, 2tsp wholegrain mustard, 1tsp sea salt, a handful of mint, leaves chopped, 3 onions, chopped. For the sticky ginger rhubarb: 700g rhubarb, cut into 2cm chunks, 70g soft brown sugar, a pinch of ground cinnamon, 2cm piece of fresh root ginger, peeled and grated. For the caraway flatbreads: 1kg plain flour, 1tsp baking powder, 4tsp fine sea salt, 2tbsp caraway seeds, 2tsp ground cumin, 4tbsp sunflower oil, plus extra for greasing.

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 160°C (140°C fan oven) gas mark 3. Put the garlic bulbs in a large roasting tin and balance the pork shoulder on top. Sprinkle with salt and black pepper. Sprinkle the lemon zest over the pork, then douse with a good drizzle of olive oil.
2. Put a double layer of baking parchment over the pork, then cover the whole tin with foil. Roast for four hours.
3. Top and tail the fennel, removing the outer layer and saving the green fronds to garnish. Finely chop the fennel into slices and put them in a serving bowl. In a blender, blitz together all the remaining ingredients to make the dressing. Add to the bowl with the fennel, toss well, then garnish with the chopped fronds. Put in the fridge for at least one hour.

4. Scatter the rhubarb over a baking tray and cover with the sugar, cinnamon and ginger. Cook, uncovered, in the oven on the shelf above the pork for 40 minutes. Allow to cool, then transfer to serving bowl.

5. For the caraway flatbreads, put the flour in a large bowl and stir in the baking powder and salt. Add the caraway and cumin, and stir to combine. Gradually add water to make a dough that is soft and a bit sticky. Add the sunflower oil and knead for 10 minutes or until the dough is smooth. Transfer to a lightly greased bowl, then cover with a clean tea towel or cling film and leave in a warm place to rest for 30 minutes.

6. Divide the dough into eight pieces, then form into balls and flatten each ball to about 3mm thick. Heat a frying pan, then cook each dough round for one minute on each side. Remove from the pan and wrap in a clean tea towel.
7. Once the pork is ready, shred it onto a large plate. Serve with the fennel slaw, sticky ginger rhubarb and the flatbreads.

Sampling a legendary feast night dish no longer means a schlep to Cornwall because Hidden Hut now has a cookbook. ELLA WALKER finds out more...

IT'S hard not to daydream about upping sticks, moving to the beach and opening a cafe – the thing is, Simon Stallard went and did it.

Eight years ago, the chef, who's worked in kitchens around the world since he was 16, quit his day job and took on the lease of a National Trust ice lolly kiosk on the Roseland Peninsula, Cornwall, with his wife Jem.

The little green shed, perched on a coastal footpath above sandy Porthcurnick Beach, was transformed into The Hidden Hut – a beach cafe and lunch spot with food good enough to match the gorgeous sea-view. It's gone on to become rather renowned, but now, thanks to its new eponymous cookbook, you don't have to roam the wilds of Cornwall to stumble across its food.

Simon, who also owns Tatams in Portscatho (coffee bar by day, wood-fired taverna by night), says the Hut menu is unmoored from mainstream foodie trends, but does "follow the weather".

"Today it's raining," he says, as he looks out at the sea. "There's a howler on a daal; they're quite warming dishes, but as soon as the sun comes out, the grills go on."

The Hidden Hut is famed for its feast nights – legend

The secrets of the Hidden Hut

Simon Stallard and his team cooking paella has it, feast night tickets have sold out faster than Beyonce concerts – and the book features dishes from these events as well as classic daytime Hut recipes. On Wednesday nights throughout summer, Simon and his team get their outdoor grills and beach barbecues going and host dinner for 80-100 people on the cusp of the ocean.

The deal is, you bring your own plates, cutlery and booze, and they provide the food, "come wind, rain or shine". "They're a thing of beauty in their simplicity," says Simon warmly. "If it's a sunny evening and you've lucked out, then you really have hit the jackpot."

Part of the feasts' appeal he reckons is the fact there's no choice when it comes to what you're eating. "It sounds really weird but there's always a big focus on huge menus [in restaurants], you've got to have something to please everyone – we've done the opposite."

Some of his favourite feast nights are when the grills are loaded with shellfish. "We staple loads of newspaper to the tables and have massive great big shovels of shellfish and claws, hammers and picks. People just pick through it with a beer or a glass of wine, and hang out at the top of a beach – that's the bit that makes them mega." He believes it wouldn't work if the Hut cooped people up indoors – the charm of it comes from cooking, eating and hanging out together under the Cornish sky. There's just nothing better, he says, than being outside. "Even if you're just having a sandwich and a bowl of soup in the rain under an umbrella, there's something so real about it."

"It actually stops and slows everything down, even just lighting the barbecue in your garden, it just feels really nice. Your mindset, everything, you change when you light the barbecue – it's all good and it tastes better too."

■ The Hidden Hut by Simon Stallard is published by HarperCollins, priced £20. Photography Susan Bell. Available now.

I ALWAYS like to give you lots of notice for special days of the year. The ones which would cause you no end of trouble should you forget. Father's Day is almost upon us, Sunday, June 17, so make a mental note of that right now. Sorted? In that case here's gift ideas for dad.

If dad likes whisky... here's one with a twist. The Glenfid-dich IPA Experiment (RRP £44.93 at major retailers, including Master of Malt) is a collaboration between malt master Brian Kinsman and craft brewer Seb Jones. Three craft beers of different strengths were created which rested in whisky casks; then the casks were later filled up with whisky to develop combined flavour notes. The whisky has a delightful fruity nose of apples and citrus and to taste the citrus notes freshen a malty, spicy edge.

RAISE A GLASS

If dad likes rum... Elements Eight Republica (£30.45, thewhiskyexchange.com) won a Rum Master – the top award possible – at the Rum & Cachaca Masters organised by The Spirits Business magazine. Elements Eight make artisan rums and Republica is a five-year-old blend of two single rums from Cuba and Panama aged in Bourbon casks. It has a smoky, peppery nose of orange peel and wood, there's a citrus and spice bite in the mouth, with vanilla peeking through.

If dad likes wine... treat him to a bottle of carmenere, if dad has a tendency to lose things, don't worry, the wine world once lost this grape variety. The carmenere grape was thought to be extinct until DNA checks discovered it was growing happily in Chile (where it was thought to be merlot). Veramonte Carmenere 2015 (RRP £12, Ocado, 14.5% abv) is full-bodied with plum and bramble fruits, with a dash of white pepper and a lick of vanilla. A note of five spice creeps in, giving the sense of a sweetly concentrated wine with an alcohol kick just like port.

If dad likes gin... well this leads me to another topical theme because if dad likes gin then this Saturday sees a double cause of celebration as it's World Gin Day (June 9).

How about a glass of Peaky Blinder Spiced Dry Gin (£22.95, Sadler's Ales, Amazon)? If dad is a fan of the TV show, this gin and its Peaky-hatted character on the label, might be up his street. It is created from nine botanicals and won a bronze at the International Spirits Challenge 2018; it has a fresh aromatic nose with punches of spice.

■ Hot off the press – or rather I'm hot off the train – I visited Langley's Distillery today and I was really taken by the citrus notes of its bespoke creation, Palmers London Dry Gin (RRP £28, Master of Malt, Selfridges, Whisky Exchange). Master Distiller Rob Dorsett told me that grapefruit leads from the front on this gin – but you know what? I dipped in and found a reflection of Cointreau and then I couldn't shake it off. Yes there was grapefruit and lots of citrus and classic juniper notes but an orange note shone through for me.

INGREDIENTS:

(serves 4-6)
3 tbsp sunflower oil, plus extra for roasting
1 large chicken, jointed (you can ask your butcher to do this) and breasts reserved for another recipe
3 celery sticks, roughly diced
1 onion, roughly diced
1 leek, roughly chopped
1 large garlic bulb, cloves peeled
100g wild garlic leaves, roughly sliced (keep the flowers if you have them)
4 spring onions, finely sliced on the diagonal
A small handful of mint leaves, ripped
A small handful of coriander leaves, ripped
Sea salt and freshly ground black pepper

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 220°C (200°C fan oven) gas mark 7. Heat the sunflower oil in a large saucepan over a high heat and add the chicken legs, skin side down, along with the wings and the carcass (you may need to do this in batches, depending on the size of your pan). Fry over a very high heat, to brown all over. Transfer to a roasting tin and coat in a little more oil and a pinch of salt. Roast for 15-18 minutes until a deep golden brown.

FLAVOURS OF SPRING

CHICKEN AND WILD GARLIC SOUP

2. Add the vegetables to the same pan (there should still be some oil in there) and put it back over a medium heat. Sweat the veg for two minutes or until starting to soften but not colour.

3. Once roasted, return the chicken to the pan and pour over two litres of cold water. Season with salt and pepper. Bring to the boil, then reduce the heat and simmer for one and a half hours. Strain the soup and return the broth to the pan. Take the chicken from the sieve, remove the skin and shred the meat from the bones, discarding the bones and skin. Leave the meat to one side.

4. Divide the wild garlic among serving bowls and top with the spring onions. Divide the shredded chicken between the bowls and add the herbs.

5. Taste the broth and check for seasoning, adding more salt and pepper if needed. Ladle it over the chicken and greens in the bowl, and sprinkle over the garlic flowers, if you have them.

INGREDIENTS: (Serves 6-8)

For the pastry: 25g hazelnuts, 200g plain flour, plus extra for dusting, 110g chilled butter, cut into cubes, 1 large egg, lightly beaten. For the filling: 4 large eggs, lightly beaten, 125g caster sugar, 150ml double cream, juice of 4 lemons and the zest of 3, icing sugar, for dusting, dried edible lavender flowers, plus extra sprigs, to decorate

PERFECT PUD

CARAMELISED LEMON TART WITH LAVENDER

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 190°C (170°C fan oven) gas mark 5. Spread the hazelnuts over a baking tray and cook in the oven for 7-10 minutes until the skins have darkened and the nuts are golden underneath. Turn off the oven. Rub the nuts between two clean tea towels to loosen the skins. Pick the hazelnuts out from the skins. Leave to cool, then grind to a powder in a food processor.

2. To make the pastry, put the flour and butter in a food processor and blend until you get a breadcrumb texture. Stir in the ground hazelnuts and enough of the egg to make a smooth dough. Wrap the pastry in cling film and chill in the fridge for 15 minutes. Roll out the dough on a lightly floured work surface until it is large enough to line a 23cm round tart tin. Lay the pastry over the tin and press it into the edges and up the side, then prick the base all over with a fork, trim the edges and chill for another 15 minutes.

3. Preheat the oven again to 190°C (170°C fan oven) gas mark 5. Line the pastry case with a piece of baking parchment and add enough baking beans to cover the base. Bake blind for 15 minutes, then remove the paper and beans and return the pastry case to the oven to bake for another 10-15 minutes until light golden. 4. For the filling, put the eggs in a bowl and add the sugar. Beat together until the mixture leaves a thin trail. Stir in the cream and lemon juice. Strain into a jug and stir in the lemon zest.

5. Turn the oven temperature down to 170°C (150°C fan oven) gas mark 3½. Pour the filling into the pastry case and bake for 30-35 minutes until the filling is set but is still a bit wobbly.

Dust the top with icing sugar and, in a preheated grill, brown the top until the sugar caramelises. Scatter lavender flowers over the top and decorate with a sprig of lavender.

SOUND OUT

Meghan Trainor arrived with the bubblegum-pop infused All About That Bass, but JOE NERSSESSIAN discovers she is more than just a one-trick pony

MEGHAN Trainor is used to collaborating with the likes of John Legend, Ariana Grande and Charlie Puth, but for her upcoming album she drafted in her parent, brother and fiancé to make it a family affair.

Some people might find it awkward to sing about needing sweet love in the morning as your father offers backing vocals, but not US pop star Meghan.

"It's kind of weird," she laughs. "But we all got over that. We're not saying anything dirty, so a toddler could sing it and it's just like a sweet song. A good brushing-your-teeth song, you know, featuring my dad," the 24-year-old adds, beaming at her artful dodge.

It was 2014 when Meghan's bubblegum-pop flexing All About That Bass, littered with influences from hip-hop, country, soul and rock, shot her to international fame. Addressing positive body image, it was used by Vogue magazine to confirm society is officially "in the era of the big booty".

Meghan was just out of her teens at the time of its release but had already written, recorded, performed and produced three independently-released albums between the ages of 15 and 17.

Her upcoming album, the title of which she refuses to disclose, is not the first time she's collaborated with family. As a youngster, she formed an all-purpose party band alongside her aunt, younger brother and father, Gary, on keyboards.

Then there was her 2016 track, Mom, featuring vocals from her mother, Kelli, which she released as a Mother's Day present.

Roping in her father, who also plays piano and organ on one track, was recognition for his support throughout the years.

"He is so proud of my first album and when I was growing up I decided I would produce myself and he would help me ... it's kind of like a big thank you."

However, the presence of her family and fiancé, Spy Kids actor Daryl Sabara, didn't stop Meghan barking orders when she had to.

She met Daryl after Chloe Grace Moretz introduced the two in 2016 and they were engaged after 18 months when he proposed to her on her 24th birthday in December.

"We said 'I love you' in week one," she says. "It took a minute,

I took a break from social media for the sake of my health he did it first. He said, 'I'm enamoured with you.' I was like, 'What does that mean? Just say it!'

After just a month, she wrote him a song, titled Marry Me, so Meghan definitely doesn't do things by halves.

"We knew early, it's that cheesy line 'when you know, you know'. It's so weird 'cause I have never had anything like this with any other human, I never wanted someone ... I have been with him literally every day and I am never sick of him and I miss him when he's not in my visual sight."

Meghan began her career as a songwriter with credits for Jennifer Lopez, Fifth Harmony and Jason Derulo, and sees Ed Sheeran as someone she wants to compete with as a prolific writer. Her songs are her "babies", she jokes, and she has plenty left over from the album.

"We love them so much and we're like, 'Ohh, you're gonna drop that one?' My mum is on the mission, she's looking at every artist, like Zara Larsson needs to sing this, this is what needs to happen. I hope everyone sings my songs, that would be my dream, to be like Ed Sheeran."

Writing is her therapy and she wants the world to hear her music - particularly the forthcoming new album which includes a track reminding men of respect. It's a timely theme, given the MeToo and Time's Up campaigns. "It wasn't like I was reading the news and I was like, 'We've gotta write a song for them,' she reflects.

But she says of the women who are coming out and speaking out: "I'm very proud of them and I hope this song helps some of them, encourages them to keep doing what they are doing."

As a young woman in the industry, she says she is surrounded by female peers "taking over the charts".

Nonetheless, Meghan certainly thinks there is more to come in terms of revelations in the music industry, although she hasn't experienced anything directly herself.

"I can only imagine the stories that haven't been told. It's everywhere, and if it feels like it's more in the movie business, that's because it hasn't come out in the music industry yet."

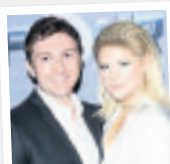

"I haven't been disrespected in that way or gone through anything like that, but I understand why, talking to an older generation of like, 'Uh things are different for you aren't they,' she adds.

Never afraid to delve into her personal side, she's been very open about her struggles with anxiety and was surprised at first about the reaction from fans.

"I think it's 'cause we have so many things to decide... all day long, even down to what we are about to post online and I think that's killing us."

"I think that's giving us anxiety and I took a break from social media for a minute and got back to working on me and my health, and started thinking about only positive things and that really cured me."

■ Meghan Trainor's two new tracks, Let You Be Right and Can't Dance, are out now and the third full-length album will be released soon.

JULIANA DAUGHERTY

WHAT a beautiful voice Juliana possesses. It's like honey oozing, spilling gently over the twanging of guitar strings, all songbird softness and subtlety but with the power to hypnotise without warning.

The singer-songwriter and multi-instrumentalist from Charlottesville, Virginia, lays out her most intimate feelings on this vulnerable, haunting album, largely using disarmingly delicate music while addressing the issues around mental illness.

Title track Light - which Daugherty admits is the darkest song on the record - with its standout beat knocking up against the evocative tones of her voice makes for a striking piece of work, while Easier is a truly gorgeous ballad.

ROGER DALTREY

- AS LONG AS I HAVE YOU

THE Who frontman is joined by guitarist Pete Townshend as he returns to his soul music beginnings.

Two new tracks are nestled in between covers of some of Daltrey's favourite songs. The 74-year-old completely owns some of these re-workings. His soulful howl soars over honking horns and hot guitar licks during a barnstorming rendition of Stevie Wonder's You Haven't Done Nothin'. A more unusual choice is Nick Cave's sombre Into My Arms. Daltrey offers a version of the song that is too similar to the original.

Daltrey's vocal abilities belie his age. However on the album's closer, the self-penned tear-jerker Always Heading Home, a lifetime's worth of memories are audible in his voice.

FATHER JOHN MISTY - GOD'S FAVOURITE CUSTOMER

THIS new album is yet more evidence that Misty is one of his generation's foremost songwriters.

Josh Tillman, to give him his real name, is another in a long line of artists who spin stories across any combination of keys, guitars and sweeping string arrangements with a dry wit, underlying melancholy and timeless musical tone.

Throughout this new record, he never seems to break a sweat. Perhaps the fact the songs tumbled out of the former Fleet Foxes drummer during a six-week stint spent living in a hotel is evidence that this was a record Tillman needed to make.

The world better be ready when he really wants to shake things up.

Be top of the crops whatever your age

T'S the latest in a long line of Nineties trends that have seen a renaissance – yes, crop tops are well and truly back on the fashion map.

But if you think midriff-baring tops should only be worn by those below a certain age (and size), think again.

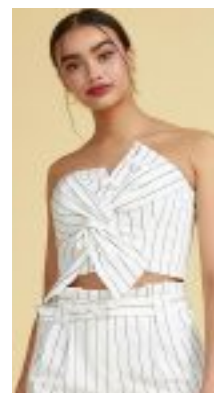

"We believe in celebrating style at any age, shape or size," says Suzi Burns from JD Williams, the retailer which specialises in fashion for women aged 45-plus.

"Our customers are becoming increasingly bolder in their fashion choices, which is great to see, and there's no reason why they can't adopt any trend and make it work for them."

The key, says Suzi, is remembering that you don't actually have to reveal your midriff at all if you don't want to (but if you do, that's fine as well).

"Older women can wear the trend by pairing with high-waisted bottoms that rise up past the belly button. This season's trend for paperbag waists is perfect for this as they tend to sit slightly higher on the torso which will minimise the amount of flesh on show," she says.

"Wrap style crop tops are also extremely flattering as they can be adjusted according to how much skin you want to show. They also draw the eye inwards which is flattering on large or small busts."

"Above all, wear with confidence," she adds. "There's no better accessory to an outfit than a big smile; style should be fun and enjoyed by everyone, regardless of age."

With that in mind, here are three flattering crop top combinations to wear with pride – and a smile.

FAKE (TAN) NEWS

NEVER USED FAKE TAN BEFORE BUT WANT A GOLDEN GLOW? KATIE WRIGHT ASKS THE EXPERTS TO SHARE THEIR ADVICE FOR SELF-TAN VIRGINS

Self tans last from five to seven days on average

EVERYBODY knows at least one: the fake tan-aholic who always looks beautifully bronzed even in the dead of winter.

For those who've been slathering on the dihydroxyacetone (that's the active ingredient, FYI) since their teens, achieving that just-been-on-holiday glow is a doddle, but what if you've always been too scared to venture down the self-tan route?

If visions of ending up looking like David Dickinson or Ross from Friends after his spray tan disaster have deterred you, you needn't worry – a subtle life-like tan is easily achievable at home.

"It doesn't have to be scary," says Carly Hobbs, tanning expert and Sienna X brand ambassador. "If you're new to tanning, take things slowly and start with the best kind of products – and preparation is everything."

So how exactly do you prepare and what are the best tanning products for newbies?

Here, Carly and two other tanning pros share their top tips for before, during and after your tan...

BEFORE: HOW TO PREPARE YOUR SKIN FOR FAKE TAN

"FOR as long as possible pre-tanning, exfoliate and moisturise as much as possible to keep skin soft, supple and tan-ready," says Carly. "On the day of your tan, exfoliate to get rid of that last bit of dead skin cell build up."

Waxing should be done 24 hours before tanning and shaving 12 hours before: "Leaving these time frames allows the follicles, from where the hairs are whipped out, time to calm down and the pores on the surrounding skin to close so you don't get a spotty tan," she explains.

"Apply a coat of nail polish to your nails on your hands and feet, as this will prevent tan from staining the nail plate," says Marissa Carter, founder of tanning brand Cocoa Brown.

If you have dark circles under your eyes, Marissa advises applying Vaseline to stop the tan from further darkening that area: "You can also add a small amount of petroleum jelly through your eyebrows to prevent the tan from discolouring them too."

DURING: THE BEST TANNING TECHNIQUE

WHILE moisturising in the week leading up to your tan is important, skip the lotion on the day.

"Ensure your skin is free from any products, moisturisers, oils, make-up and deodorant on the day you tan as this can affect the final results," warns Jayne Cooper, St Tropez skin-finishing expert.

Tanning Mousse is the perfect product for beginners. Simply apply to dry skin with or without a mitt, leave for just one minute and shower as normal and your tan will develop over the next eight hours."

If you are using a product that requires a longer development time, you must use a mitt.

"Apply your chosen tan in upward sweeping movements, overlapping each area," Jayne recommends.

"Let your tan dry before having a drink or brushing your teeth as accidental drips may wash away the colour. This also applies to tanning with wet hair," says Marissa.

Same goes for doing the dishes, and you can't get sweaty so exercise is out of the question.

"Sit back and relax in loose clothes as your tan develops, ideally go bra-less too so you don't dent or mark your gorgeous glow," Carly says.

shower after your development time, but don't use shower gel all over in the shower. Instead keep soap or cleanser to just bits and pits so not to strip off all your hard bronzing work."

AFTER: HOW TO TREAT YOUR TAN

SO YOU'VE prepped thoroughly, tanned carefully and now you're bronzed to perfection. Well done! Now what?

"The first time you shower after you've applied your tan, use shower gel but don't exfoliate your skin," warns Marissa.

"Moisturise daily with an oil-free moisturiser to keep your skin hydrated and gently exfoliate every two to three days, which can extend your tan by up to three days," Jayne says. "Self tans will last on average five to seven days depending on which product you're using."

Once it's faded, exfoliating or using a tan remover mitt will remove any last traces.

"Don't forget your SPF when going out even when you're tanning – faking it doesn't protect you from the sun," Carly says.

"And if ever you want to strip off your tan, dive into the swimming pool. The chlorine will pare back all of the colour!"

WORLD CHAMPION AND OLYMPIC SILVER MEDALIST COLIN JACKSON TELLS PRUDENCE WADE ABOUT LIFE AFTER ATHLETICS

THERE'S something undeniably cheery about the Welsh accent, and ex-hurdler Colin Jackson adds to this with constant giggling.

But behind this sunny disposition, it's evident Colin has iron willpower. Other than natural talent, it was a whole lot of hard work that won him an Olympic silver medal and two golds in the World Championships during his athletics career. No biggie, but he still holds the world record for 60m indoor hurdles.

Now 51, Colin admits his training schedule isn't quite as gruelling as it used to be. And fair enough, he's no longer competing – but this doesn't mean he's let himself go – once an athlete, always an athlete.

We spoke to Colin about his training regime, the importance of exercise, and how he takes care of himself.

What is being a professional athlete actually like?

"BEING an athlete isn't this glamorous life people always presume it is," Colin explains. "Everyone sees you travelling the world and having a good time, but they don't see the other side of it – the strict regime."

To perform at the top level of any sport requires an inordinate amount of hard work, and for Colin it was no different. He won his first silver medal aged just 19 at the 1986 Commonwealth Games, and went on to have a blistering career.

"You do physically beat yourself up," he says of his younger years. "Every day when you get up something hurts and aches. It's not something you do just to keep fit, you know that your opponents are taking themselves to extremes and you have to match that."

Being a professional athlete can be tough at times. Has it been worth it?

"WHEN sport was my job, I didn't see the benefits. But as I get older, I see that my body's in much better nick than most other 50-plus year-olds."

What does still being active mean for you?

"I CAN still touch my toes, which means I can still go snowboarding, skiing or play hours of tennis if I want to."

"Being fit and healthy has extended my opportunities."

What do you do to stay in shape?

"I WOULDN'T want to train to those extreme levels again!" he says with a laugh. "But I do a lot of circuits and gym work. I still go out on my bike and other forms of activity as well – it's a lot more fun now I don't have the pressure

Concentrate on your diet, because the kitchen is the best gym ever

Olympic hurdler Colin Jackson may not be competing these days, but he still knows the importance of keeping fit

“Everyone sees you travelling the world and having a good time, but they don't see the other side of it – the strict regime of competing.

"It's also given me chance to experiment with things I would never have done before, such as a weekly yoga class."

"I live in Wales with such an incredible coastline, so I can do all sorts of outdoor activities like paddleboarding."

Why is fitness so important?

"IT produces positive endorphins in your body and your mind, and you get a real sense of achievement. That's why sport plays a really important role in mental health."

As someone whose career has been based around competing against others, how have you managed to maintain a healthy mindset?

"LOTS of the time in our everyday lives we're comparing ourselves to other people, and that can have a really negative effect."

"But if you're active in sport and you achieve the things you personally set out to, it makes you feel genuinely better."

How important is food for you?

"AS an athlete, you're always thinking about food. You're permanently on a diet, and diet is still very much a part of life for me."

The 'gym bunnies' often say a six-pack is made in the kitchen. How true is that?

"IT'S very true – it's much easier to get a six-pack by dieting than it is by exercise."

"Life is about a choice, and you decide how you choose. Concentrate on your diet, because the kitchen is the best gym ever."

■ Colin Jackson hosted the Qube Awards, a ceremony hosted by leading training provider, Qube Learning, to celebrate the merits of apprentices, trainees and the employers who work with them.

1 CAN HELP YOU CONCENTRATE
STRUGGLING to focus at your desk? A recent study published in the British Journal of Nutrition that investigated the 'post-lunch cognitive crash' (when our memory and attention starts to dip in the afternoon) found that eating a high-fat lunch with almonds resulted in significantly smaller declines.

This is because almonds are packed with nutrients that are important for brain health, including vitamin E, folate and unsaturated fatty acids, and L-carnitine – which has been found to have brain-boosting, neuroprotective benefits.

2 GOOD FOR YOUR HEART
THE high fat content in almonds is mainly mono and polyunsaturated that benefit your heart.

Almonds contain linoleic acid, an important fatty acid which contributes to the maintenance of normal blood cholesterol levels, reducing the risk of coronary heart disease.

3 THEY'RE GREAT FOR SKIN
ALMONDS are the healthiest and cheapest way to get an A-list glow. They are high in zinc and riboflavin, and a source of niacin, which all contribute to the maintenance of normal nails and skin.

They are also rich in vitamin E, which can help to protect cells from the oxidative stress caused by pollution, UV rays from the sun, cigarette smoke and other environmental factors – all of which contribute to the skin ageing process.

4 CAN HELP WITH WEIGHT LOSS

A 2014 study published in the European Journal of Nutrition found that a mid-morning, 42g snack of almonds helped to control appetite and resulted in a reduced calorie intake for lunch and dinner.

Rather than skipping a snack, keeping a pot of almonds by your desk may curb hunger pangs later in the day.

5 THEY'LL GIVE YOU ENERGY

THEY come loaded with good nutrition that will power you through a long shift at the office. As well as optimising brain function with proteins, they also contain a potent mix of fibre and healthy fats to help you to stay focused, no matter what the day may bring.

Pineapples, plants, Kahlo and lobsters - GABRIELLE FAGAN reveals her pick of the quirkiest on-trend homeware accessories to snap up now

Your home space should be as on-trend as your wardrobe. And just as one well-chosen accessory can update an outfit, one on-trend piece of homeware can be all it takes to bring a room bang-up-to-date. It's all about ringing the changes every so often, so spaces don't look stale but fresh and contemporary. Right now, this means it's time to embrace pineapples, a flamboyant Mexican artist, plants and lobsters - and then use them with a light touch and stand back and wait for the compliments on your style credentials.

These items won't break the bank but they'll definitely punch above their weight when it comes to impact...

FOLLOW THE FASHION FOR FRIDA

Mexican artist Frida Kahlo's face is being splashed all over homeware right now, while her colourful and compelling life is being celebrated with an exhibition at the V&A London (June 16-November 4).

"If you're looking to bring vibrancy and interest to your home, the vivid image of artist, Frida Kahlo, will add fiesta colour and lashings of character," says Nadia McCowan Hill, Wayfair's resident style advisor.

"Having survived illness and an accident in her youth, Kahlo's bold and unflinching image has come to symbolise triumph over pain and powerful feminism, making her an empowering addition to any interior. She's often depicted with flowers in her hair against a backdrop of lush greenery, bold blooms and folksy motifs, which give her image a boldly bohemian vibe."

■ DECOR TIP: To capture the spirit of the artist, style a Frida Kahlo art print against a kaleidoscope of colour and pattern. Handwoven and handmade homeware add an authentic sense of craftsmanship, and combined with colourful cushions and fresh flowers, you'll conjure a carnival atmosphere. Mexican 'Day of the Dead' motifs are also appropriate.

PICK A PUNCHY PINEAPPLE

This is the must-have fruit for rooms, and suits our growing passion for all things tropical.

"Pineapples have always been a symbol of hospitality and have historically been associated with the mysteries and flavours of the tropics. Some aspects of that still carry forward to today, making pineapples a bold, chic choice to decorate your home with flair," says Rebecca Snowden, interior style advisor, Furniture Choice.

"Their distinctive shape and tall crowns make them a perfect choice for a playful print with lots of character - a feature wall covered in pineapple wallpaper is a cheerful addition to the home, great for the living room, kitchen, or even an entryway," she adds. "Their sweet, kitschy appeal allows them to be utilised in unexpected ways, such as pineapple bookends, cushions, and even candle holders." If you've really fallen for the fruit, Wallsauce's Pink Pineapple Wall Mural, from £26 per square metre, would make a statement.

■ DECOR TIP: To make this look your own, experiment with colour. For a lighter touch, play with bright, neon colours, and for more sophistication, consider a metallic finish, such as gold or bronze.

SHELL OUT FOR LOBSTERS

The fishy trend for lobsters first swam to the surface in the spring fashion collections, and now they're getting their claws into home decor.

"Who can forget when flamingo fashion came on the scene? Those flamboyant birds appeared on everything from fabrics to wallpaper, but now lobsters are pinching their space," says Alison Hughes, co-founder of lifestyle homeware brand, Cream Cornwall.

"These bright red crustaceans have a similar appeal to flamingos – because they're so iconic and distinctive. We have them decorating lampshades, cushions and tableware, and they're really enjoying a moment in the sun currently. We predict more and more people will fall for lobster loveliness."

■ DECOR TIP: Make a statement with a lobster print or decoration, if you're fishing for compliments on your decor credentials. Alternatively, conjure a touch of coastal cool by featuring the theme in tableware and a collection of cushions.

FAKE IT WITH FOLIAGE

Foliage and succulents – those fleshy leaved plants including cacti – are the go-to green accessories this year – and if you lack 'green fingers', just opt for those ultra-realistic and perfect-in-every-detail artificial versions.

"For me, plants magically transform spaces, add texture, and are a game changer when it comes to enlivening surfaces," says designer Abigail Ahern, whose Abigail Ahern/Edison collection at Debenhams includes faux succulents and plants.

"Faux plants are even better, as they're pet-friendly and add a punch to any surface. Faux plants and flowers add colour, shape and life to a room, and like artwork, they are another powerful tool in your decorating arsenal. Needless to say, I am a little bit obsessed!"

■ DECOR TIP: Too many hard angles and straight lines in a room can make a space uncomfortable – so follow interior designers, who often use plants and trees to soften corners, as they add such beautiful focal points. Remember to vary the tone of green and mix feathery, shiny, matte and prickly all together to get the most intoxicating foliage effects.

WELL CONNECTED

In its early days it was always regarded as being a rather dull, dowdy looking and performing supermini that was the easy, comfort choice for early-retiree drivers who wanted an affordable small new car that was quiet and efficient to run.

As a result though, the Micra hatchback did well for Nissan in those early days but with increasing competition in the supermini sector with newer, more high tech and all-round better models arriving changes were certainly needed to keep it in the leading pack.

The latest and fifth generation Micra has certainly done that because it's far more radical and even sporty looking with loads of standard kit on board along with some of the cutting edge technology pinched from bigger Nissan models, such as the Qashqai.

So it's a totally new ball game for the five-door Micra, which still sits on the same platform as before but is a bit longer, wider and lower than any previous models, with just a choice of three engines.

These are a 898cc three cylinder 88bhp turbocharged petrol, a one-litre 88bhp diesel and a one-litre 70bhp normally aspirated petrol and as the norm nowadays with Nissan there are five trim levels, starting with the Visia, on to Visia+, Acenta, N-Connecta and the flagship Tekna.

As with previous Micra models prices are sensibly too starting at £12,751 for the one-litre petrol powered Visia while the subject of this road test – the N-Connecta with the three cylinder petrol engine under the bonnet costs £16,990.

This includes £575 for what Nissan calls Energy Orange metallic painted body and to complement this extra dash of colour buyers can also have an interior personalisation pack in matching Energy Orange for another £400 which includes on door and seat trims and the fascia trim.

Nissan now offers a wide variety of these extra colour touches so buyers can personalise their car – here on the test car it's a question of whether one thinks spending an extra £1,000 on pretty trimmings is worth it or not.

Apart from its startling new look body the other major changes is that all models across the range now have a far more impressive list of standard features on board that includes Bluetooth, automatic emergency braking, lane departure warning, Active Ride and Trace Control electronics (from the Qashqai) and more.

On top of all this there are more safety features than ever on all models such as six airbags, anti-lock brakes, stability control and seat belt warning which no doubt contributes to its good score of 5-star in the Euro NCAP ratings.

The N-Connecta tested, sitting on 16-inch alloy wheels, had a few extras as standard like air conditioning, smartphone connectivity, heated door mirrors and a really useful and easy to use seven-inch touch screen.

The interior has a bit more passenger head and leg room space than before and overall the cabin has a far more high quality feel about it this time around plus there seems to be more cubby hole spaces such as over one-litre in the glove box and door bins that will each take 1.5-litre water bottles and ample storage in the centre console between the two front seats.

The Micra has always been one of the best in class for boot space and this model excels again with over 300 litre available behind the 60/40 split rear seats – drop those down and it shoots up to 1,004 litres.

At the end of the day for most buyers it's a question of which engine to choose from the three on offer – the three cylinder turbocharged 898cc in the test car has to be the strongest contender in my book.

Many car makers today have gone down the three cylinder one-litre petrol route and most are quite noisy and raucous sounding when the driver accelerates but this Micra one is completely different.

It's extremely quiet and refined when accelerated hard and once out on the open road it's smooth and comfortable enough but as with any sub-one litre engine the driver has to use the five-speed manual gear change frequently to gain the best in terms of performance, particularly with four adults on board.

As for fuel consumption it's like any car today and depends on how the driver behaves when all said and done and the test car returned an overall average of 54.1mpg which compared to the official combined figure of 64.2mpg.

The five-speed gear change was light to use but with a positive feel about making going up and down the gears a relaxing operation.

The Micra has come a long way since it first appeared here back in 1983 but with all this latest updating in terms of looks, specification, comfort and ride it now bears no resemblance to those models of yesteryear.

Nissan's backroom team have done a good job with this latest generation and whilst it's perhaps not as sharp in terms of handling and performance as the leading supermini, Ford's Fiesta, is no longer the slow-coach and dowdy looking as it was for many years.

PEUGEOT RECOMMENDS TOTAL. Official Fuel Consumption in MPG (l/100km) and CO2 emissions (g/km) for the 2008 SUV Range are: Urban 47.1 – 65.7 (6.0–4.3), Extra Urban 65.7 – 85.6 (4.3–3.3), Combined 57.6 – 76.3 (4.9–3.7) and CO2 114 – 96 (g/km). For the 3008 SUV Range are: Urban 37.2 – 67.3 (7.6–4.2), Extra Urban 55.4 – 80.7 (5.1–3.5), Combined 47.1 – 70.6 (6.0–4.0), CO2 136 – 103 (g/km). For the all-new 5008 SUV Range are: Urban 36.2 – 62.8 (7.8–4.5), Extra Urban 53.3 – 72.4 (5.3–3.9), Combined 46.3 – 68.9 (6.1–4.1) and CO2 140 – 106 (g/km). MPG figures are achieved under official EU test conditions, intended as a guide for comparative purposes only and may not reflect actual on-the-road driving conditions.

A FAMILY FAVOURITE

If you need a large family car with stacks of space and SUV looks, the Peugeot 5008 with its seven seats and huge boot could be just what you are looking for.

The current 5008 is totally different from the previous model from Peugeot and offers a comfortable composed drive and a really smart interior.

Based on its smaller 3008 sibling the 5008 is considerably longer and offers extra practicality thanks to its third row of seats which can also be kept flat to increase space.

The original 5008 was really a people carrier but Peugeot recognised that they were going out of fashion and swiftly moved the car into the SUV sector with this new model.

It is much better looking than its fairly dull predecessor and is now quite handsome and imposing. It has a smart front with a nice upright grille, long bonnet and neat light clusters.

Limo-like rear doors and diamond cut alloys add to its appearance as does its contrasting roof and silver roof rails.

Inside the difference is even more of a surprise. The cabin is one of the smartest available and full of nice touches and quality materials.

It features Peugeot's i-Cockpit set-up which includes a digital driver's information display, touchscreen infotainment system and smart piano-keyboard style switches.

The seating system features three separate middle row seats that slide forwards and backwards, recline and fold down independently. The familiar hidden storage compartments in the rear footwell are also retained.

As you would expect the third row of seats are really suitable for children but they do fold easily into the boot floor when not required.

With five seats in place 952 litres of luggage space is available and if you collapse the middle row this rises to an impressive 2,000 litres. The motorised tailgate fitted to this Allure spec model added £750 to the price.

The Allure trim level is generous and provides all the creature comforts and safety features you could want including dual-zone climate control, DAB radio, navigation, Android and Apple smartphone connectivity, front and rear parking sensors, reversing camera, automatic emergency braking, lane departure warning and blind spot detection systems.

You can select from a range of diesel or petrol engines but the car I sampled came with the award-winning 1.2-litre PureTech petrol unit mated to the company's six-speed automatic transmission.

The willing three-pot turbocharged petrol engine was up to the task and provided enough punch to deliver decent performance and economy. It never felt stressed at any point and cruised comfortably at motorway speeds.

There is no four-wheel-drive option but my car came with Peugeot's optional grip control system costing an extra £470 which has modes for mud, snow and sand. For such a large vehicle the 5008 handled well and its suspension dealt with winter-ravaged roads without difficulty.

The 5008 offers all that is required to make it a family favourite.

Members of Harlow Gymnastics Club show off their trophies, medals and rosettes

Medals aplenty for gymnasts

Club shines at county qualifiers with huge silverware haul

By Andrew Franczak
andrew.franczak@hertsessexnews.co.uk

THERE were medals galore for members of Harlow Gymnastics Club at the General Gymnastics county qualifiers in Colchester.

The top three in each event won medals and now qualify for the East Region level finals in Ipswich.

The gold medalists also won a trophy and fourth to sixth positions were awarded rosettes.

In the men's events, Kieran McMahon (16) was second overall after winning the vault and high bar, and taking second on the parallel bars and floor in the level 5 age 16-18 event.

In the level 5 age 13-15 event, Harry Ferguson (13) finished second overall after taking gold in the bars, third on the floor and vault and fourth on the parallel bars.

Daniel Capodici (12) was fourth overall after placing third in the vault, fourth on bars, fifth on parallel and sixth on the floor.

Mark Hall student Matteo Reynald-Abad (12) was second on floor, third on bars, sixth on parallel bar and fifth overall.

Little Parndon pupil Hrissian Gunov (11) finished first in the vault and first on the floor, to take sixth overall, with team-mate Stanley Broughton (13) fourth on the vault and floor, finishing seventh overall in the same event.

Max Riddle was awarded first overall in the age eight to nine level 3 event after placing first on vault, bars and parallel bars, and second on the floor.

There was further medal joy in the level 2 age eight-nine event, where eight-year-old Hermione Mellor won the bars and was second on the floor to finish in 13th place overall.

Shannah Stacey (12) was third in the vault, fourth on bars and eighth overall in the level 5 age 11/12 event.

Competing in the level 5 age 13/15 category, Burnt Mill student Brooke Walker (14) won the vault and was 12th overall; Ellie Kenway (13) was second in the vault and 16th overall and Holly Montague (13) finished third in the vault and was 15th overall.

In the same event, Chloe Ann Wenz (12), Louisa Akers (13), Beth Porter (12) and Saffron Hoskin (14) placed 15th, 20th, 22nd and 24th overall respectively.

St Marks student Elana Dimitriu (11) was third on the floor, sixth on the bars and 11th overall in the level 4 age 12/14 category.

Yasmin Akram (11), Daisy Dove (13), Lily Gray (12) and Olivia Eustace (12) placed 19th, 24th, 28th and 37th overall in the same event.

In the level 3 age nine/10 event, Brooke Hayzelden (10) won gold in the vault, was fifth on the floor and finished ninth overall. Team-mate Emily Forey was sixth on the beam and 15th overall, while Bobbie Burns took sixth in the vault and was 34th overall.

Elizabeth Chung, Sydni Barker, Daisy Clowes, Harriet Pask (8), Emily Pask (8), and Tamzin Mason placed 11th, 24th, 26th, 30th, 31st and 36th overall respectively in the same event.

Matilda Cook (11) was fourth in the vault and 14th overall in the level 4 age 10/11 group, with team-mates Emily May Price (11), Mia Brine (9), Kira Henson (10), Ellie Aimable (10), Scarlett Chart (10), Zsafia Ojimbah (10) and Ellie Senior (10) finishing 15th, 19th, 21st, 23rd, 25th, 27th and 29th overall respectively.

In the level 3 age 11/12 event, Yasmine Thong (10) was fourth on bars, sixth on both vault and beam to finish in ninth overall.

Lucie McIntyre (10) and Skye Gir-olami (10) placed 11th and 16th overall.

Head boys' coach and club co-owner Peter James said: "It's brilliant to see our club bringing home some medals. A massive congratulations to the gymnasts and I'm very proud of all of them."

Skipper says his thanks as he heads off to new club

HARLOW Town are looking for a new skipper after Craig Pope announced this week he is leaving the club to join Essex Senior League side Walthamstow FC.

"It has been an honour playing for the club," said Pope, who joined the Hawks in February 2015, and was made captain the following season.

He lifted the play-off trophy and led the team to promotion from the Isthmian Division One North.

Pope went on to make 117 appearances for the Hawks, scoring six goals and became a fans' favourite as well as offering valuable experience to the side.

"I would just like to say a big thank you to all the fans for their support and the great times I've had playing for Harlow Town FC," added Pope.

"I wish the club every success for the future."

Mark Holloway, formerly of Grays Athletic and AFC Hornchurch, has joined as first team coach as Hawks prepare to host Leyton Orient on July 7 in their first pre-season friendly.

Hawks boss Danny Chapman said: "I am pleased to have got Mark on board as he has a wealth of experience in football."

"His knowledge of players and his coaching ability will only add to our goals next season, and Spencer [Knight, assistant coach] and I are looking forward to working with him."

It's Groundhog Day as Harlow fall well short

IT was a case of Groundhog Day for Harlow as, yet again, poor batting cost them dear as they stumbled to defeat against Loughton in the Shepherd Neame Essex League Division Two.

Having won the toss, Loughton put Harlow into bat, and they collapsed to 14-4.

Harlow then rallied and Soulat Ali (44) and Nicky Baxter (41) moved the score on to 97 before Ali fell.

This was followed shortly after by the wicket of Baxter, and Harlow were now on 109-6.

Mitchell Howarde (19) and Andre Riddell (17) then moved the score on to 154-8, but the tail failed to wag and Harlow were all out for 160.

In reply, the visitors started off brightly and had Loughton at 21-3, but any hopes of a win were ended by an excellent batting display from Vibhor Yadav who smashed 106 not out in 85 balls to see his side home.

Nicky Baxter took 2-28, with Callum Sykes 1-27, Howarde 1-50 Ross Vasani 1-40 and Jake Messenger 1-1 from two overs.

■ THERE wasn't much joy for Harlow Town who lost at Horndon-on-the-Hill in their Division Two match and are still without a win.

Town were asked to bat and openers Suraj Chauhan (45) and Ashley Alderson (14) made a promising start, putting on 49 for the first wicket.

Jibran Azam (31) batted patiently, putting any loose delivery away, however once again wickets fell regularly.

Pat Yates (29) and skipper Daniel Farmer (41) looked to rebuild the innings, as Town finished on 197-9 off their 50 overs.

In reply, Chauhan picked up an early wicket Walsh, however dropped chances released any early pressure of the hosts.

Ben Eversden's 4-39 haul put the hosts in a spot of bother, but Jeff West (68) steadied the ship to see them over the line by four wickets.

Amaniel posts parkrun victory in great time

HARLOW Running Club member Amaniel Tesfay was victorious in the town's parkrun, clocking a fantastic time of 17min 38sec to defeat opposition from a field of 193 finishers.

He was followed home by: Andy Kitson 2nd, 19:37; Bed Usher, 4th 20:42; Andy Terrell 5th, 20:46; Andy Bradley 8th and 2nd Vet 50, 21:39; John Bull 10th and 3rd Vet 50, 21:48; Steve MacKenzie 11th, 21:57; Bobby Draper 16th, 23:00 (PB); Catherine Ridge 21st and 2nd female, 23:21.

Graham Saville 25th and 1st Vet 60, 23:43; Chris McCarthy 27th, 23:50; Darren Rautenbach 30th, 24:13; Terry Ridge 34th, 24:26; Martin Elven 40th, 25:05; Jim Bates 52nd and 1st Vet 70, 26:23; Hannah Wenlock 56th, 26:53; Robin Lozeau 59th, 27:14; Louise Cootes 61st, 27:14; Jane Evans 78th and 2nd female Vet 50, 29:34; Austin Nyamande 92nd, 30:34; Alan Wellbelove 113rd, 32:29; Spencer Brooks 158th, 37:47 and Karen Kitson 175th, 42:02.

At the Bedford Team Triathlon Relays the club's Tri section entered five mixed teams.

Andy Kitson, Louise Kedge and Julia Gardiner finished in 13th place out of 44 teams in 3hr 46min 17sec; Ryan Smith, Anna Robey and Paul Schroder were 16th in 3:50:29; Darren Rautenbach, Gail Nichols and Jon Shelton were 18th in 3:56:53; Michael Gornall, Kerry Mavris and Alan Cootes finished 34th in 4:27:04 and Jim Martin, Justin Patten and Dionne Jones came home 37th in 4:30:08.
